THAW'S OWN STORY HIS DEFENCE

Decided That Best Way to Convince Jury of His Sanity Now, Though He Slew White in Insane Fury, Is to Allow Him to Go on the Stand—Due to Littleton's Advice.

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—Harry K. Thaw, the young Pittsburg millionaire, will take the stand to justify in person the shooting of Stanford White.

That this move had been decided upon became known to-day when the case was resumed with nine men in the jury box, selected after the examination of only fifty-seven talesmen. The examination of talesmen was taken up again at 10:22 a. m. with the expedition that characterized yesterday's sessions, and it was believed that the box would be filled before night.

The nine prospective jurors passed a pleasant night in the quarters set apart for them in the Knickerbocker Hotel and came into the courtroom smiling.

Thaw walked into the courtroom with a springy step and stopped to exchange a few words with Attorney Peabody before taking his seat. Considerable time was spent in the rollcall of veniremen, and a number of absentees were fined $250 each for failure to heed the court summons.

When the prisoner was brought in Josiah Thaw was the only member of the family present, and the examination of Myron H. Thayers, a contractor, was under way when Evelyn Thaw came in and smiled a greeting to her husband as she took her seat. She was attired as yesterday.

William H. Roberts was chosen as juror No. 10 shortly before noon.

The decision to let Thaw take the stand was not made because of his eagerness to do so, but because it is now regarded that his testimony would be of practical value in the case.

TO TELL WHY HE SLEW WHITE.

Thaw wanted to take the stand when he was first tried, but his counsel with difficulty persuaded him to abandon his intention. During the time he has been in jail, awaiting his second trial, Thaw has continually debated with himself the advisability of telling the jury, in his own words, just what actuated him to kill White. He has regretted hundreds of times that he did not insist on doing so when first tried and he regarded his capitulation to his attorneys as a mistake.

This information was secured from a reliable source, and, in addition, is known in certain legal circles that when Martin W. Littleton was retained as chief counsel, Thaw's first solicitation of opinion was on the matter of direct testimony by himself.

"I think I should have gone on the stand in the first place," he is reported to have said to his counsel during one of the conferences in the Tombs. "I could have told the jury a great deal—not more details,

RIVAL MEETINGS OF DEMOCRATIC LEADERS

M'NARY CALLS STATE COMMITTEE TOGETHER FOR THURSDAY; FEENEY CALLED IT FRIDAY.

Ex-Congressman William S. McNary, vice-president of the Democratic State committee for 1907, has sent out notices to the newly elected district members and also to the eighteen members at large chosen at the Democratic State Convention at Springfield, calling a meeting of the Democratic State Committee for Thursday, January 9, at 1 o'clock, in the Quincy House.

John P. Feeney, chairman of the State Committee for 1907, has called a meeting of the forty district members and also of the eighteen members who were elected by the Williams-Feeney-Kiley convention, to be held on Friday, January 10, at 2 o'clock in room No. 14 at No. 85 State street, Boston.

This means that the Whitney Democrats, who stayed regular and stood by the official ticket, have decided not to "lie down" to the men who bolted the ticket and put up Bartlett as an independent candidate.

"To Be Settled on Its Merits."

One of the most prominent district members of the Democratic State Committee, who doesn't belong to either the Williams or the McNary faction, said to-day: "I am glad Mr. McNary has called this meeting. It means that the question as to who is in control of the Democratic party in Massachusetts will be settled on its merits.

"I believe there will be a large attendance of [illegible] members at McNary's meeting on Thursday. I believe these district [illegible] take the meeting out of McNary's hands and will elect their own officers, without regard to the members at large.

"Personally, I do not think that either the Williams bunch of delegates-at-large or the McNary gang is entitled to representation on the Democratic tSate Committee.

"The Secretary of Statt has held that members-at-large of State committees are illegal, even when they are elected in the ordinary way at a legal convention. Neither the McNary men nor the Williams men are entitled to membership on this State committee. The only properly elected members are the forty district members elected by the Democrats in their respective senatorial districts last Fall.

"Throw Out Boston Gangs."

"These forty members should organize the committee to suit themselves and should throw out the two Boston gangs who tried by force and fraud to control the Democratic State convention last Fall.

"The Ballot Law Commission has decided that the Whitney ticket was legally nominated at Springfield. If Mr. Whitney was legally nominated at Springfield, then the eighteen members at large of the Democratic State Committee who were nominated by the same convention are entitled to membership in the Democratic State Committee if any members at large are seated. My opinion is that the forty district members will decide that no members at large were properly elected.

"We certainly can't stand for the strong-arm bunch that disgraced the party and the State at Springfield.

"Although the Whitney men are entitled to be seated if any delegates at large are seated, they also should be thrown off on the ground that members at large are contrary to law, and also that these particular members at large stood for Mr. Whitney, who has disgraced the party and placed it in a position where it is, under the law the third party instead of the second in the State.

"Doomed to Defeat."

"I have talked with several of the district members of the State Committee and I find that there is almost a unanimous sentiment against rewarding Mr. Feeney and Mr. Kiley for the work they did at Springfield. Any ticket branded with their names is doomed to defeat.

"They can't get in control, as they are trying to do, by taking up the candidacy of Mr. Douglas for Vice President. Mr. Douglas, I have no doubt, will be glad to pay the expenses of the Massachusetts delegation to Denver, providing the delegation would agree to vote for him for Vice President. Personally, I would like to see Mr. Douglas nominated, but I do not think the use of his name will overcome the prejudice against Mr. Feeney and Mr. Kiley that exists among Democrats throughout the State because of the outrageous proceedings at Springfield."

"With one exception, every member of the State Committee with whom I have talked is opposed not only to Feeney and Kiley but also to George Fred Williams. Mr. Williams at the hearing before the Ballot Law Commission accepted full responsibility for the proceedings of the Feeney-Kiley convention and declared he approved of everything that was done there by Feeney and Kiley. After the State election he gave out a remarkable statement in which he referred to the result as 'glorious to contemplate.'

"Mr. Williams may be proud of the Springfield convention and the result of the election, but, if so, he is the only prominent Democrat in the State with whom I have talked who feels that way about it. I have been surprised to see the great opposition to Mr. Williams that exists among men who for years have taken his advice and have followed him.

"The sentiment among the district members, so far as I have been able to fathom it, is almost unanimous in favor of throwing out both of the old gangs and reorganizing the Democratic party anew on a clean, radical basis."

The call sent out by Mr. McNark for the State Committee meeting was signed not only by Mr. McNary, but also by Thomas J. Collins, member-elect from the Sixth Suffolk District.

It is probable that a third meeting will also be called to be attended only by the forty district members.

MAY ARRAIGN INDICTED OFFICIALS TO-MORROW

POLITICIANS OUT UNDER BONDS; INTEREST IN REGARD TO TRIALS INCREASES.

City officials and others who have been indicted by the Suffolk Grand Jury in connection with the Codman street land deal, the purchase of holiday prizes for the city and the paving stone contracts may be arraigned in the Superior Court to-morrow.

The indicted men have all surrendered to the police and are out on bail, the amount of which was set by District Attorney John B. Moran. Meanwhile, interest among politicians and friends of those indicted increases, and they are hinting at some interesting disclosures when the cases come to trial.

The indicted men are former Alderman George H. Battis, accused of having manipulated the purchase of Fourth of July prizes to his own financial interest; Thomas F. Maher, flagging contractor, who is alleged to have sold flagstones to the city at exorbitant rates because of an arrangement with certain City Hall officials and Michael J. Mitchell, superintendent of supplies; Harold C. French; former Alderman Samuel Kelly and Oliver Gragg, real estate brokers; former Alderman William Berwin; former Superintendent of Streets James H. Doyle and Attorney Owen Kaine, who figure in the Codman street land indictments.

None of the indicted will discuss the indictments, but they all declare that they will be able to prove their innocence when the cases come to trial.

District Attorney Moran is busy to-day disposing of the numerous other indictments which were found by the Grand Jury and he would not say what his intentions were in regard to the cases of the city officials and the real estate men who figure in the Codman street land deal.

GRAGG SURRENDERS TO POLICE AND IS HELD IN $2,000 BAIL

Oliver Gragg, a real estate man of No. 9 Monmouth street, Somerville, the last to surrender of those who were indicted by the Suffolk County Grand Jury in connection with the Codman street land deal, appeared at police headquarters to-day and gave himself up to Inspectors Armstrong and McGarr, who formally placed him under arrest.

After he had been booked he was released on $2,000 bail. Gragg is charged with the larceny of $1,114.43 from Fred A. Perkins of Melrose, the original owner of the Codman street property.

A similar charge has been made against Harold C. French and former Alderman Samuel Kelly, real estate brokers.

Radiance of Evelyn Lights Up the Sombre Setting of the Trial

POINTS OF DIFFERENCE BETWEEN PRESENT AND FORMER COURT SCENES.

By Dorothy Dix.

The curtain has gone up for the second time upon the tragedy that ended the comedy at the Madison Square roof garden a year and a half ago, and Harry Thaw once more faces the bar of justice and has begun again his long, stubborn, bitterly waged fight against the double danger that menaces him—death and the madhouse.

The scene at the opening of the trial is like, and yet unlike, that of a year ago. Outwardly the stage setting is scarcely changed at all, for the case is to be heard in the same room in which it was before. From the walls the Three Spinners that weave and cut the thread of man's fate still smile down their inscrutable, mysterious smile as of yore. Liberty, Fraternity, Equality still turn their dream-starred eyes on the beholder and the Blind Justice behind the Judge's bench holds her equal scales with an unwavering hand, as she held them, in hope or fear, for the prisoner before.

Most of those who assisted directly or indirectly at the first trial are in their familiar places. Mr. Jerome, always a picturesque figure, always vivid and intense, always nervous and restless, paces up and down within the bar, his hands in his pockets, his square cut face, like an incisive interrogation that literally corkscrews the information he demands, turns now on this one and now on that, as if he had never left off examining witnesses or badgering alienists about different kinds of paranoia.

Garvan on the Alert.

At the end of his table, quiet and calm and self-controlled, sits Mr. Garvin, brimful of new facts and old knowledge about the case, ready, as last year, to hand his chief the precise bit of information on any ramification of the subject at the exact psychological moment he needs it. For Mr. Garvan is the man behind the gun; the man who gets up the case, who eats with it and sleeps with it and travels with it and winnows the handful of grain out of the bushel of chaff brought to him by perhaps a hundred or two witnesses. A wonderfully piquant contrast is that between the explosive District Attorney and his mild-mannered assistant.

Only two of Thaw's old counsel were present yesterday: Russell Peabody, spick and span and immaculately dressed, and who did not seem to have turned a hair in the year (and he has found enough hairs, God wots, to turn), and Dan O'Reilly, ruddy, red-cheeked, cherubic, looking so like an understudy of Cupid that it seems the most natural thing in the world for him to hold a perpetual brief for love in trouble.

Too Many Lawyers Before.

Last year Thaw had six lawyers. This year he has only three, whereby he is twice as well off, for, just as too many cooks spoil the broth, too many lawyers spoil the verdict, as perhaps the young millionaire knows to his cost.

The chief professional interest naturally centred in Thaw's trial lawyer, Martin W. [illegible] who has been selected to succeed the pyrotechnic Delmas, and concerning whom the general public knows little save that he came up out of Texas a few years ago, unheralded and unknown, and has "made good" both in his profession and in politics in Brooklyn to such a degree that he was picked out by the astute Mr. O'Reilly—whose knowledge of men few question—to lead the Thaw forces into battle.

Mr. Littleton is a handsome man of the dark—almost creole—type, though he was born in the Tennessee mountains, an environment that produces fighters. He is rather below than above the average height, rather heavy set, broad of shoulder, rotund of person, full fed, full blooded—the very embodiment of vitality and young vigor. He has a round face; thick dark hair that he wears long and bushy; a broad, big forehead; hazel eyes, under very distinctly marked brows; a thin-lipped mouth, and a straight, classically cut nose that looks almost oddly Grecian in his full face. His chin is strong and determined looking, and his hands are remarkably small and soft and white and well kept—evidently his vanity, if he has one.

He is well dressed—in dark trousers, with a little stripe of gray, and a black cutaway coat worn with a green tie with an inconspicuous little pin in it. His expression is intelligent and humorous, and his voice is rich, soft, rolling, and fills the room easily and clearly in audible tones.

Family Circle Is Thinner

Just before court opened Thaw's wife and his sister, Mrs. Carnegie, and his brother, Josiah, slipped quietly into the places reserved for them, and that last year at the trial gained the sobriquet of the "Thaw pew." The prisoner's mother, old and worn, and with the double grief of her son's and daughter's sorrows laid upon her, is too ill in Pittsburg to come on to the trial at present. The Countess of Yarmouth, his favorite sister, is fighting her own bitter battle with an unworthy husband in England, and so she, too, is prevented from giving her brother the comfort of her presence as she did at the last trial, so the "family" that has stood so loyally and faithfully beside Harry is sadly diminished in numbers.

Both Mrs. Carnegie and Evelyn are dressed in the quietest and simplest manner possible. When Mrs. Carnegie came into the courtroom her face was covered with a thick, black veil that she raised inch by inch, as if it suffocated her, until she finally threw it back across her hat. She has a kind of fierce, dark beauty, a face that looks as if it were torn by every emotion of grief and pity and love and hate, and as she sits looking at her brother it stiffens into the very mask of tragedy. Of all the Thaw family, not even excepting his wife, she is the one who seems to suffer most and to whom the sympathy of a stranger goes out most.

Evelyn Almost Radiant

Evelyn looks almost radiant and far, far more beautiful than she has ever been before in her life. She has fleshened up a little, just enough to fill out the wistful Burne-Jones hollow in her cheeks, and her face has taken on the color of a wild rose that gives the final touch to her loveliness. She is attired in the same schoolgirl fashion that she affected at the first trial—a simply made little blue gown, cut barely below her shoe tops; a little scoop hat trimmed with a choux of ribbon in shades of purple and violet, and at her neck the same style of wide, white linen collar—like Eton schoolboys wear—and a tie bow.

This time Miss May McKenzie is not present to add the splendor of her sartorial display to the Thaw crowd, and so it is outwardly as dun and drab looking as it was probably sad and gloomy within. Only Evelyn, who believes that Thaw is sure to be freed, is cheerful, and her face breaks into irrepressible smiles at every odd happening of the day.

Thaw himself came into the court looking wretched. As soon as he had taken his seat yesterday, Mr. Jerome read the indictment against him and Mr. Littleton pleaded not guilty for the prisoner, because he was mentally irresponsible for his acts at the time of killing White. It was all perfunctory and done perfunctorily, and then began the tedious work of getting a jury, which is progressing again today, and Thaw settled himself back in his chair with something that was like a sigh of relief.

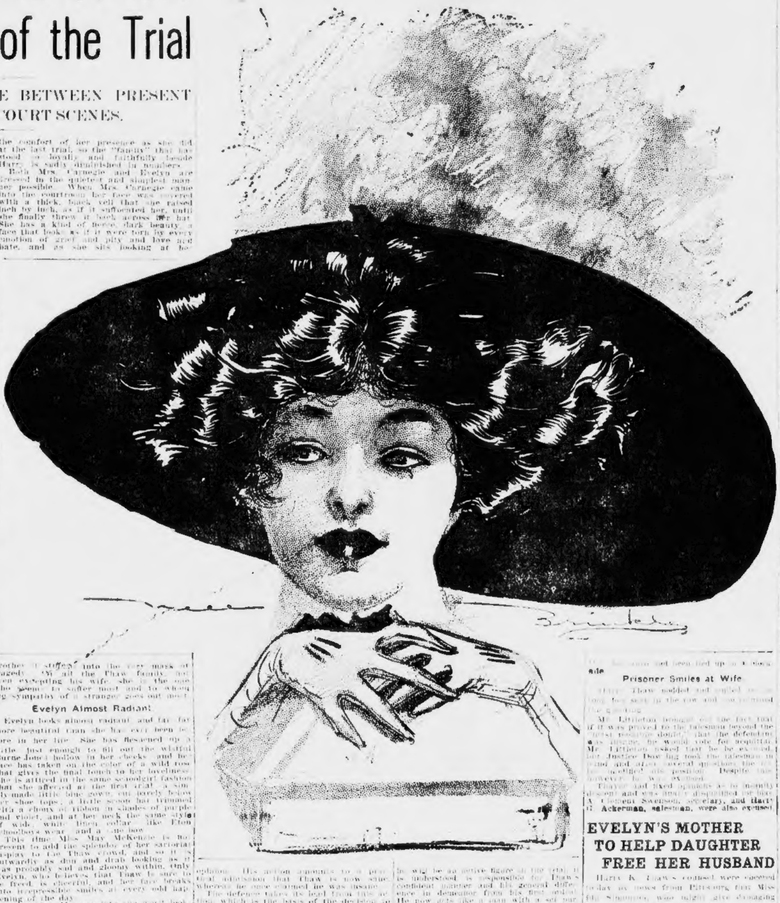
Thaw Silent for Hours.

The great trial, whose issues are so momentous to him and his, had begun. There was something to do besides waiting, besides counting off the dreary, aimless days in the prison. At the best there was freedom and the wife he loves and all the pleasures that money can buy before him. At the worst, the suspense that eats out the courage in a man's heart as a rat gnaws out a cheese was nearly over.

So he settled back in his chair to watch this last great fight for his life and liberty. The portfolio that he brought in with him remained unopened. He scarcely spoke a word to his lawyers. He sat for hours at a time almost as motionless as a statue, one hand shading his eyes, just waiting.

For what? God alone knows.

EVELYN THAW IN COURT AS SKETCHED BY NELL BRINKLEY



THAW TO TELL OWN STORY IN DEFENCE

but I think I would have been better understood."

MENTAL TORTURE AND DESPAIR

It is known that Thaw has finally carried his point and that his attorneys are convinced that, by his taking the stand, he will not only make clear his emotions and his burdened state of mind at the time of the tragedy, but that he will also convince the jury that, while irresponsible at the time of the killing, he is now competent, intelligent and capable of calm, sound reasoning.

The advice of Pittsburg friends, who have remained in the background, also played considerable part in Thaw's determination to go on the stand at this trial. Powerful friends of the family and men who are well known throughout the country have advised Thaw that he had better tell his own story, thus lifting all doubt as to the goading despair, the compelling mental torture, that sent him to the roof of Madison Square Garden to seek and shoot White.

The forerunner of the new move is seen in yesterday's addition to the plea, which reads that Thaw was not guilty, by reason of insanity shortly prior to, and after, the tragedy. The defence maintains that Thaw is now altogether rational, and will prove to the satisfaction of the jury, by Thaw himself, if possible, that this is true.

It is not Mr. Littleton's intention to rest the fate of Thaw's present sanity upon the report of alienists alone. The prisoner himself, in direct and cross-examination, will supplement the experts' opinions, by putting the jury in the place of examining experts. The twelve men can then judge whether or not Thaw shows any marked traces of mental incapacity.

FINE POINT IS RAISED

This move raises one of the finest points of the case. District Attorney Jerome in the first trial admitted the insanity of Thaw. The defence contended sanity. The defence, however, now maintains insanity, but "at the time of the crime" not longer.

District Attorney Jerome, by keeping Thaw in the Tombs since the last trial with no extraordinary provision for the safe-guarding of an insane man, has condoned his case, according to counsel's opinion. His action amounts to a practical admission that Thaw is now sane, whereas he once claimed he was insane.

The defence takes its lead from this action, which is the basis of the decision to have Thaw testify. The knowledge that he will be an active figure in the trial, it is understood, is responsible for Thaw's confident manner and his general difference in demeanor from his first ordeal. He now acts like a man with a set purpose, a clear program and a calm decision.

TALESMEN FINED AS CASE IS RESUMED

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—Justice Dowling reached the court before District Attorney Jerome, and the legal array of the defence had put in an appearance and the court was formally opened before any of the lawyers had reached their places.

The remainder of the first panel—twenty-nine talesmen—answered to their names, and Jerome came in just before the prospective juror was called.

Josiah Thaw was the only member of the prisoner's family in court when the proceedings began. Members of the second panel of one hundred men ordered to report to-day occupied seats in the rear of the courtroom.

Those who failed to answer the call of Clerk Penney were fined $250 each.

The temporary jurors, looking bright and fresh after the night spent at the Hotel Knickerbocker, sat through the long roll call laughing and joking.

Thaw With Portfolio.

Harry Thaw was called from the pen at 10:35 a. m. and the work of examining the talesmen then began. Thaw wore the same suit and carried the same portfolio as he did during the first trial. He appeared disappointed when he looked toward the "Thaw row" and saw only his brother Josiah.

"I have heard from Mrs. Thaw," he said to a reporter. "She will be down later in the morning," he added.

Myron W. Thayer, a contractor, of No. 1031 Prospect avenue, the Bronx, was the first talesman called. To District Attorney Jerome he said that he was single. He is a native of Saratoga, having come to New York about three years ago. Mr. Thayer said that he had formed an opinion in the case from what he had read in the newspapers, but he was confident that this opinion would not influence him in weighing the evidence presented.

While Mr. Thayer was being examined Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw hurried into the courtroom. She wore the same blue dress with schoolboy collar and blue hat with violets that she wore yesterday.

Explaining her delay, Mrs. Thaw said [illegible] had been tied up in a blockade.

Prisoner Smiles at Wife

Harry Thaw nodded and smiled as she took her seat in the row and continued the questioning.

Mr. Littleton brought out the fact that if it was proved to the talesman beyond the "first possible doubt," that the defendant was insane, he would vote for acquittal. Mr. Littleton asked that he be excused, but Justice Dowling took the talesman in hand and after several questions the talesman modified his position. Despite this, however, he was excused.

Thayer had fixed opinions as to insanity defence and was finally disqualified for bias. A. Clement Swenson, secretary, and Harry G. Ackerman, salesman, were also excused.

EVELYN'S MOTHER TO HELP DAUGHTER FREE HER HUSBAND

Harry K. Thaw's counsel were cheered today by news from Pittsburg that Miss Ella Simonton, who might give damaging testimony against young Thaw, but who could not be found by the prosecution at the last trial, would not allow herself to be dragged into the case this time.

Coupled with this came also the information that Mrs. Charles J. Holman, mother of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, would do anything she could to help her daughter free her husband.

Mother Aids Evelyn

Mrs. Holman has persuaded Miss Simonton not to testify. The mother will also prevent Evelyn's brother, Howard, who was a figure in the first trial, from coming to New York.

The statement made to a reporter of the BOSTON AMERICAN in Pittsburg today by Mrs. Holman at her home on Berkshire avenue, is of a highly interesting nature in the light of the fact that mother and daughter, as well as brother and sister, are estranged.

"Nothing would please me so much," said Mrs. Holman, "as to see Harry Thaw cleared of all blame in it. His wife is a daughter of my own flesh and blood. Her happiness is mine. Anything that Harry Thaw has said or done to me or any pain he has caused me is trivial in comparison to my interest in my daughter's happiness.

Mrs. Holman to Aid Thaw.

"I was sure nothing would please her in this world so much as a verdict of not guilty in the trial now under way. Under those conditions the belief that I would put a straw in her husband's path to freedom is too repulsive for thought. It would be little short of unnatural for a mother to aid in sending her own daughter's husband to the electric chair."

Mrs. Holman declared at no time since the tragedy on the Madison Square Garden roof had she even thought of taking the stand against Thaw. She also denied most vigorously the report that District Attorney Jerome has any deposition from her, or even any notes that might aid him in building up his case. She declares that she has never been approached by either the District Attorney or any of his agents.

"I am just as sure," continued Mrs. Holman, "that Miss Simonton, whom all the papers have reported as enlisted in the service of Mr. Jerome, will not be a witness at the present trial. She has not been subpoenaed, and in a talk which I had with her since her return from Africa she declared that she would not be dragged into the trial.

"I am sure that she will stick to her decision. It is true that Thaw was quite rude to her and she has grounds for feeling against him, but I believe she is friend enough of mine not to testify against my wishes and it is my desire that she stay out of the case.

Explains Howard's Attitude.

"Personally, I have been particularly unfortunate in being placed in a bad light with the public. At the last trial my son Howard went to New York against my wishes and advice in an effort to protect my name. His attitude was entirely misunderstood and the New York papers created the impression that our house was divided against itself. It was never our intention to have Howard aid Prosecutor Jerome.

"The boy went primarily at the solicitation of Mr. Hartnett, secretary to Stanford White, in the hope that he might, in some measure, protect the name of a much maligned man, who had been a friend in need to me and mine. In addition to Mr. Hartnett's request, Lawyer Dan O'Reilly had sent word to us that Florence wished to see Howard. The boy went finally under instructions from his father to deliver a message which he carried to no one but Evelyn. When he arrived in New York, Thaw's attorneys would not permit him to see his sister alone, and the message which he carried was never delivered.

"My son will not go to New York during the present trial and then he will not be misunderstood. With the memory of the past before us, and our daughter's present attitude toward us, it is impossible for my husband, my son, or myself to raise our hands in defence of Thaw, but we will do nothing against him and we wish him well and hope that he gains his freedom."

LOST LINER SAFE IN QUEENSTOWN HARBOR

LONG MISSING MOUNT ROYAL REPORTS, AFTER STRUGGLE WITH TERRIFIC SEAS.

Special Cable to Boston American.

QUEENSTOWN, Ireland, Jan. 7.—The long missing Canadian Pacific steamship Mount Royal entered the harbor here today under easy steam.

The Mount Royal left Antwerp for St. John, N. B., December 7, and not the faintest report was received concerning her until last night, when the Spanish steamship Vivina arrived at Liverpool with news that the skipper believed he had sighted the missing craft 250 miles off Fastnet.

The Canadian Pacific officials had, in the meantime, practically given up the Mount Royal with 305 passengers and 100 seamen, as lost.

The captain of the long overdue steamship, with its 304 passengers and 100 seamen aboard, reported on the strangest and most dangerous experiences an ocean liner has undergone within recent years.

Strange as it may seem, the Mount Royal, from Antwerp to Halifax, had almost reached her port when she became disabled. The steamer was at 45 degrees west longitude, which is about 350 miles east of Cape Race, when, battered, tossed, flung hither and thither by giant waves, her machinery became disarranged and her boilers began to leak badly.

Wild Scenes on Board

Mountainous seas pounded the ship for days, smashing time and again clear over the bridge. The vessel wallowed, strained and plunged in indescribable fashion.

The passengers, mainly immigrants from Southern Europe, became panic-stricken. The captain ordered them below, and the hatches were battened down.

There, in the steerage quarters, the simple folk, thrown violently about the ship, believed that every instant the ocean would roll in and the ship would be swallowed up. They prayed and raved in turn. Mothers clung to their babes day and night, and whole families, with peasant simplicity, locked in embrace until exhausted, fearing to separate lest they would die apart.

Fathers and mothers gathered their children about them, and the most energetic and confidence-restoring actions of the officers and crew could do nothing to dissipate their fears. In the mean time, the ship, like a chip in a maelstrom, was thrown this way and that way, and the officers battled bravely to save her and her human freight.

Driven Back to Europe.

On Christmas eve the reckoning showed the vessel was on the forty-fifth meridian. Hope was growing that the American continent would soon be sighted, but the seas rose higher and higher, and the vessel strained the greater.

The boilers began to leak badly and clouds of steam blinded the stokers and hindered them in their work. Steam ran low and the ship could make little or no headway. The machinery became disarranged and, with certain destruction threatening if the course was persisted in, the captain decided to run back before the storm.

Then for days terror reigned on the ship, for it became known that, instead of getting closer to land, the course traveled was being retraced. Everything possible was done to quiet the emigrants, and a constant patrol was maintained in the steerage quarters.

The intrepid captain remained on the bridge until he dropped from exhaustion and had to be carried below. The mate took his place.

Early this morning the vessel staggered into Queenstown. During the last few days the crew managed to make temporary repairs, and the spirits of the passengers began to rise. Most of the passengers and the crew are well, despite their terrible experience, although many are yet suffering severely from violent seasickness.

DR. HILDRETH A GREENOUGH CASE WITNESS

In the famous litigation for the disposal of the $1,200,000 estate of Joseph I. Greenough, a continued hearing is on today before Judge Robert Grant in the Probate Court and the three alleged wives of the dead man were present.

Attorney Louis Dabney for Mrs. Martha D. Higgins, wife No. 1, called Dr. John L. Hildreth in rebuttal. Dr. Hildreth was a member of the School Board in 1881 and he testified that Mrs. Emma Pomeroy Eaton, wife No. 2 in the case, was a teacher at the Washington Grammar School, Cambridge.

At that time he was attending Greenough and Mrs. Eaton concluded to change her calling for that of nursing and became a nurse for Mr. Greenough. Dr. Hildreth testified one day that Mr. Greenough said: "Don't you think it would be a good idea, Doctor, if I would marry Mrs. Eaton, and then I would not have to hire a nurse?"

Attorney Morse, counsel for Mrs. Eaton (wife No. 2), then cross-examined Dr. Hildreth.

At this juncture Judge Grant asked Attorney Dabney to read from the testimony of his client that portion which told directly of the circumstances leading up to her marriage with Mr. Greenough.

EAST WIND DRIVES SINGER FROM BOSTON

Lily Lena, the English comedienne, who has been widely advertised by the Orpheum's management, and who was compelled to stay out of the bill there last week, has finally been forced to cancel her engagement here, after appearing at two performances yesterday. The reason is that Boston's east wind has given her a bad throat trouble which has not as yet been subdued. She will probably come here later when she has recovered.

SCORES FLOCK TO JOIN IN HUB RENT STRIKE

Plans for Concerted Action to Be Laid at To-night's Meeting.

LANDLORDS ARE ALARMED

Declaring that excessive rents for their squalid tenements have become a burden beyond endurance, men and women are flocking to-day to join in the rent strike movement to force the landlords of the Boston Jewish quarter to reduce these charges.

In every street and every home the same lament is heard: "We cannot stand the rent oppression much longer, for, as it is, we and our children go hungry and ill clad to satisfy the greed of the landlords."

"Pay or Move."

"The determination and the willingness to fight for their rights on the part of the general public has come as a surprise even to us who expected the movement for lower rents to be a success," said Nathan Miller, secretary of the provisional rent strike committee elected at Saturday night's meeting to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter.

"The call to rise in arms against the landlord who, aided by the constant demands for rooms in the Jewish quarter, fleeces the poor, has come at an opportune time, for, notwithstanding the hard times and the lack of work, many of the landlords have raised the rent, and the answer to all appeals for justice and mercy has been a cynical 'We don't care. If you don't like it, move.'

"When we meet to-night we expect that all the details will be arranged, and that before the week is over the strike will have begun in real earnest."

Novel and ingenious reasons are given for raising the rent. A Chambers street landlord has declared that all his tenants will have to pay a dollar each month for "sweeping the halls."

Woman Leads Movement.

The woman leader of the rent strike is Mrs. Harry Dubinsky, who occupies a tenement of three rooms at No. 4, Pohle alley 12, for which she pays $14 a month.

"When I expostulated with our landlord," she says, "his answer was that I ought to consider myself lucky, for all my rooms are light, and pointed out that others paid $15 for as little space and had a dark kitchen besides.

"Ever since the plans to call a rent strike have become known there is talk of nothing else among the Jewish population. Some of the small landlords have already become alarmed. Other landlords are defiant, still others are inclined to [illegible] the strike, but all are in dread of the prospect, and if the people will only act in accord, our battles will be easily won.

"The women and I spoke to a good many of them will be firm. On them falls the hardship of keeping house on the small sum left from the meagre earnings of their husbands after the landlord's demands have been met; they know what a world of good even a dollar a month would do toward buying shoes and dresses for their little ones; their hearts are bleeding [illegible]st as their pockets are being bled by the [lan]dlords, and they have pinned their hope [on] this strike. If the men keep up their end of the fight, victory is ours."

Plan Mass Meeting.

No matter where one goes within the limits of the Boston Jewish quarter, one hears the same story, and the desire to bring the landlords to reason is apparent on every side.

When the meeting of the provisional rent strike committee takes place to-night at No. 13 Poplar street, the first definite step in inaugurating the strike will be taken.

Many organizations have decided to send delegates who are to work hand in hand with this committee. A general call to the Jews of Boston will be issued, and the date and place of the first mass meeting will be decided upon.

SENSATION IN BROOKLINE AT THOMPSON SUIT

Aristocratic Brookline is amazed over developments in domestic troubles of Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Thompson of No. 20 Kent street, which, according to Mr. Thompson, are soon to be aired in the divorce court.

Mrs. Thompson, who is a daughter of Rufus G. F. Candage of the Board of Marine Underwriters and one of Brookline's most prominent citizens, has gone to New York, and her husband, formerly a well known hotel man, declares that she will never again enter his home.

He hints at sensations when he tells his story of the troubles which ended in Mrs. Thompson's trip to New York, and in the suit which he says he will bring a Boston business man will figure.

"Never Want to See Her."

Mr. Thompson when he returned to Brookline a week ago and learned that his wife had disappeared took his two children, one three years old and the other ten months, to the home of his mother on Ivy street in the Back Bay, and on Thursday he went to New York to try and locate his wife.

"I located her in New York," said Mr. Thompson to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter to-day, "but I will not say where she is. She said that she would go away some day. I never want to see her again and I shall certainly begin proceedings for divorce. I will only say with reference to a man who will figure in the divorce proceedings that he has an office in Boston.

Will Ask for Divorce.

"He is not a friend of mine and I never met him. My finding out about him at all was one of those things, you know, that a man discovers after the bird has flown. I have not yet decided on what grounds I shall base my grounds for divorce, but I have evidence sufficient to warrant a divorce.

"Mrs. Thompson is not here now and I don't know and don't care where she is," was [illegible] that Mrs. Candage would say about her.

SCENIC TEMPLE SUCCESS.

The second week of the Scenic Temple opened auspiciously. The character of the entertainment pleases women and children. The grand organ, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Bonnin; Henry T. Waite, violin virtuoso; the Visocchis, concertina artists; Kitty Hoffman, and J. W. Meyers, basso, and a boys' choir all earned several encores. New films were thrown on the screen with electrical effects. The same bill will be continued throughout the week, with a change of moving pictures on Thursday.

HIGGINS SWORN IN AT SECOND INAUGURAL

ARTILLERY BOOMS A SALUTE AS RHODE ISLAND'S GOVERNOR TAKES OATH OF OFFICE

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 7.—Governor James H. Higgins was inaugurated to-day for his second term.

The ceremonies were elaborate, and were attended by many of the most prominent people of Rhode Island.

Immediately after the formal declaration by Deputy Sheriff Thayer that the government had been formed, Battery A, Light Artillery, fired a salute of seventeen guns on the capitol grounds.

Each of the branches of the Legislature, the Senate and the House, met at 12 o'clock, the Governor calling the Senate to order.

The oath of office was administered to Governor Higgins by Secretary of State Charles C. Bennett, after which David J. White was re-elected reading clerk.

The House was called to order by Horace N. Hassard of Newport, its senior member. Hon. Roswell B. Burchard, Republican, of Little Compton, who was opposed by John W. Hogan of Providence, Democrat, was elected Speaker of the House.

After the ceremonies there were numerous dinners, and to-night the Governor's reception will be held.

O'CONNOR IMPROVING.

The condition of Representative Patrick H. O'Connor, who has been seriously ill at his home, No. 14 Frederick street, South Boston, is steadily improving. Reports that Mr. O'Connor is suffering from bronchial pneumonia and Bright's disease are incorrect. His illness is the result of a general breakdown.

JUDGE ACCUSES DR. AMESBURY

"I find that death was caused wholly by the unlawful act of her husband, Walter R. Amesbury."

This declaration concludes the report presented to-day at Dedham by Judge Frederick J. Hutchinson of Hyde Park, who conducted the inquest into the death of Mrs. Anna Barrett Amesbury. It finds that Mrs. Amesbury died in Hyde Park, December 23, in consequence of a sudden hemorrhage produced by a wound inflicted by a twenty-two-calibre revolver in the hands of her husband.

The deceased, he reports, was standing in the kitchen on the third floor of the suite occupied by Mrs. Virginia Rowe and by her sons, Walter R. Amesbury, Jr., and Ira L. Amesbury, when, without any warning to this person, Amesbury stepped from the dining room into the kitchen and deliberately shot her.

PUT LEAGUE HEARING OVER

The hearing scheduled before Attorney General Dana Malone at 11 a.m. to-morrow on the Lowell Independence League case is postponed to Wednesday, January 15, at request of City Solicitor J. Gilbert Hill of Lowell. Mr. Hill has court cases set for to-morrow in Lowell. The hearing is on the petition of the Lowell Independence League for representation on the new Lowell License Commission under the "leading party" provision.

COALERS' DEAL JUMPS STOCKS

A substantial rise in the coalers characterized the opening of the New York market to-day, and these stocks were the features. The rise was considered due to the belief that a plan will be announced within a few days whereby the ownership of the coal mines and the coal railroads will be separated. The rest of the list rose in sympathy.

In Boston coppers were slightly lower.

ORANGE STORE OWNER SUICIDE

ORANGE, Jan. 7.—Mitchell Schneider, aged sixty, committed suicide by hanging himself from a beam in the paint store of Willard & Flynn. Mr. Schneider was a prominent man of the town, and was the proprietor of a large furniture store here. William Willard found the body when he entered the store, which adjoins Schneider's furniture store. The man had been dead but a short time, for the body was still warm.

He leaves a wife and several children. The family can assign no reason for his act.

WEBSTER FILES BILL FOR HUB COMMISSION

With the idea of providing for the appointment of a commission "for the investigation and improvement of municipal government in Massachusetts, and especially in the city of Boston," Representative Walter A. Webster, who claims partial responsibility for the creation of Boston's finance commission, filed a bill to-day with Clerk Kimball of the House of Representatives.

The bill calls for the appointment of four persons by the Governor and three persons by the Mayor of Boston "from the personnel of the finance commission of Boston," to form the new commission.

The chairman of the commission, according to Mr. Webster's bill, shall be designated by the Governor.

One clause of the bill says: "The commission shall consider the advisability of reorganizing the system of city government and shall particularly consider and devise an improved form of government for the city of Boston."

The commission may recommend, Mr. Webster says, "a model charter of charters for any city or town in the Commonwealth."

The bill calls for the expenditure of not more than $20,000 by the commission.

20 CHILDREN RESCUED FROM BURNING HOMES

Little Ones Saved at East Boston Fire Through Heroism of Parents and Citizens.

MANY NARROW ESCAPES

It was [illegible] their parents, citizens and [illegible] the score of children [illegible] from the fire at Nos. 17 and 19 Meridian street, East Boston, at midnight. [illegible] the discovery of the flames [illegible] M. McW[illegible] carrying [illegible] ity, who [illegible] the cold.

Most of [illegible] street to the home of Mrs. Annie Tierney at No. 14 Meridian street. At one time Mrs. Tierney had [illegible] in one room, most of them babies. As the clothing of most of them was in the burning homes, there was a scramble on the part of neighbors to find enough to keep them warm.

Narrowly Escape.

The family of Mr. and Mrs. John Ford, who live on the second floor of No. 21, had a narrow escape. There are [illegible] children in the family, Harold, [illegible] Ella, seven; Alice, five; Jennie, four; Florence, three, and Robert, eighteen months. The four oldest children [illegible] in the rear.

The flames burst through a skylight directly outside the windows of the room, and the wind carried smoke and flame into the room. Two kittens [illegible] the bed clothes and awoke the [illegible] who commenced to cry.

Their father ran to [illegible] ing two of them in [illegible] others to follow. Two of the little ones ran upstairs to the apartment of William Alexander, who carried them to the street. Alderman Michael J. Leahy, who happened to be passing, rushed into the house and assisted out Mrs. Ford and the younger children.

Alderman Aids Them.

Then Alderman Leahy rushed into the part occupied by Mrs. [illegible] and succeeded in getting her out with her two boys, [illegible] eleven years, and [illegible] nine years.

At No. 15 Meridian street live John Margey, his wife and [illegible] James Bennett, wife and five children, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Tierney and three children. They all got out safely with the assistance of police and citizens. James Bennett rescued his children by rolling them downstairs.

The fire caused a damage of $[illegible].

BATTLE COAL FIRE IN RUIN OF $260,000 EAST BOSTON WHARF

Hundreds of tons of coal [illegible] burning today in the ruins of the plant of the Suffolk Coal Company at Nos. 178 and 180 Border street, East Boston, which was destroyed by fire that started at midnight, causing a loss estimated close to $260,000. [illegible] the coal will burn for several days. An engine and a full crew of firemen will be [illegible] at the scene until all danger has passed.

SAM FESSENDEN PASSES AWAY

STAMFORD, Ct., Jan. 7.—Samuel Fessenden, [illegible] in Connecticut politics for over forty years and originator of the world famous phrase "God Almighty hates a quitter," died at his home here today.

Fessenden came into national prominence when he ran the Blaine campaign in 1884. It was in conversation with Joe Manley of Maine that he uttered his "quitter" phrase that has passed into history.

Last August Fessenden retired from active politics, saying he found the strain too great for his health.

CAN MRS. BALL FIND CHILDREN?

BROCKTON, Jan. 7.—Mrs. Mary Ball, mother of [illegible] Robert Ball, who is now confined in the Taunton Insane Asylum, has declared her belief that she can go into the woods and retrace her wanderings during the days when she had the children with her and thus lead the authorities to a solution of the mystery.

It is said that the asylum authorities will not permit her to make the trial. The police here, although having given up an aimless search through the woods, are carrying on [illegible] investigation and City Marshal Kingman [illegible] which may result in [illegible].

WANTS LINCOLN DAY HOLIDAY

A bill to make Lincoln's birthday, February 12, a legal holiday has been filed at the State House by Max Henry Newman. When the bill comes up for a committee hearing it will be pleaded for by members of several boys' clubs. Similar bills have been introduced at previous sessions, but met defeat because of the proximity of Washington's birthday.

WILLS $70,000 TO CHARITIES

Several Cambridge charitable institutions will ultimately benefit by the will of George Bird of Cambridge, filed in the Probate Court at East Cambridge.

He left real estate valued at between $70,000 and $80,000. His estate was left to his widow during her lifetime, with the exception of small legacies.

Upon the death of his widow his real estate, with his homestead on Essex street, is to be divided equally between the Avon Home, Cambridge; the Baptist Home on Brookline street, Cambridge, and the Holy Ghost Hospital on Cambridge street, Cambridge.

BABES SAVED FROM FLAMING ROOM

FATHER OF 12 CHILDREN IN MONEY SHARKS' GRIP

POOR CIGARMAKER ENTANGLED BY INTRICATE DEALS FIGHTS TO SAVE HOME.

Having fallen into the clutches of several money sharks at times when he was out of work or facing illness with a wife and twelve children to support, Philip [illegible], a cigarmaker at No. 2028 Washington street, says the [illegible] Loan Company threatens to take his furniture, claiming he owes them $240, although he asserts he has paid $87 on a debt of $140.

"They told us last week that they were going to foreclose and take our furniture [illegible] Saturday," said Mrs. [illegible], a fragile little woman, who says she [illegible] to a state of worry over the matter.

"You and I went to see a lawyer," interposed Mr. [illegible], "and he told them not to give us sixty days' notice before foreclosure."

Intricate Financiering.

"Four years ago I got $25 on an assignment of wages and was to pay $1 for fifteen weeks, at the same time taking out $5 worth of checks good for [illegible] at the Boston Banking Company, which is all the same concern, really. Every week I didn't take the bank checks I had to pay 25 cents as liquidated damages.

"For [illegible] weeks I used to pay my money without getting any receipts. Then I asked the girl I paid the money to for a receipt. She looked surprised, but I got the receipts after that, and I have them all.

"Ten dollars was due after about three months, I think, and I couldn't pay it all, but wanted to pay $1 a week. They wouldn't take it. They told me to see the president, Mr. Firman. He asked me if I had any furniture. I gave them a mortgage on our goods for $50. They gave me back only $23, charging me $27 for interest and fines, etc.

"About a year later I got $30 more on the piano. So I actually received in cash $[illegible]. I have receipts for money paid on these sums amounting to $87.79. But they say I owe them $240.

Two Suits in Court.

"I stopped paying some time ago and they threatened to foreclose. I had gone to see their attorney, Mr. O'Neil, and agreed to pay $1 a week, which I did for about forty-two weeks. Then he wanted me to sign a renewal of the note and mortgage, which we refused to do, after consulting a lawyer, who told us not to sign any more papers or pay another cent."

Two suits arising from dealings with loan concerns came up in the Superior Court this week. That of Saul and [illegible] Jacobs against the Barkers Loan Company et al. was assigned for trial next week. Bates, Nay & Abbott, who had appeared for the respondents, announced their withdrawal from the case.

Mr. Jacobs, who lives at No. 230 Silver street, South Boston, charges fraudulent representations. He signed a mortgage which he was assured covered a piano only, but found later that it was on all his furniture. An injunction has been granted restraining the loan company from foreclosing.

The case of William Hirsh against Daniel J. Hallisey et al., of Somerville, was also put over until next week in the same court.

Five Per Cent. a Month.

Hirsh is an attorney and money lender. He loaned the Halliseys, father and son, $300 on a mortgage on machinery at No. 384 Atlantic avenue. This failed and Hirsh secured an injunction restraining the defendants from [illegible].

The Halliseys allege that Hirsh charged them interest at the rate of 60 per cent. one year. The law allows but 18 per cent.

The suit of former Representative [illegible] Queeney of Norfolk avenue against the Hub Loan Company will be called next week in the Superior Court for a final decision.

Mr. Queeney, who was in the House in 1899, borrowed $100, the note being made out for $105, and was charged at the rate of FIVE PER CENT. PER MONTH for interest.

The law stipulates that not more than 18 per cent. per annum shall be charged as interest on loans under $1,000, and that all sums paid in addition, except $5 for making and securing the loan, shall be deemed to be interest and shall be applied toward discharging the principal and legal interest.

Settlement Refused.

On July 23, 1907, Mr. Queeney and a friend met the manager of the Hub Loan Company in Court square and tendered him $75 to discharge the debt. This was refused, although Manager Staples offered to credit it on account.

The plaintiff then secured an injunction through Attorney Daniel V. McIsaacs, restraining the respondent from foreclosing a chattel mortgage on his horse, two wagons and a harness.

The case has been heard before Leslie S. [illegible] as master, and only awaits a ruling by the court.

UNION LABOR VOTES TO SUPPORT BILLS TO CURB THE SHARKS

The Boston Central Labor Union, representing over 60,000 wage earners, has enthusiastically taken up the fight against the money sharks.

Six hundred delegates to the union, in Wells Memorial Hall, enthusiastically applauded Norman E. McPhail, president of Boston Typographical Union No. 13, as he denounced the money sharks of the State and their practices, and passed a vote unanimously pledging the support of organized labor in Boston to measures soon to be presented to the Legislature tending to wipe out the evil and calling upon the legislative committee of the State branch of the American Federation of Labor to co-operate in bringing to an end the harsh and discreditable methods of the "sharks."

President McPhail, addressing the delegates, said:

"Nearly 300 men and women in the city of Boston derive their entire income from the loaning of small sums of money. To them over $1,000,000 per year is paid as tribute by the working men and women of our city. To what better source should an appeal for relief from these sharks be made than to the representatives of organized labor?

"At the present session of the Legislature a bill or bills will be introduced which will endeavor to check or stop entirely this [illegible] and growing evil. It is necessary that a united front be made, for there is no question that any restrictive legislation of this sort will be bitterly fought by the money sharks, who will not hesitate to spend money in a fight for their existence.

"I ask that the legislative committee of the Central Labor Union, representing 60,000 or more wage-earners of this city, co-operate in the endeavor which will be made to curb the rapacity of these human vultures.

"I feel sure that we can demonstrate to the Legislature the crying need of the legislation proposed. I would also ask that the delegates to this central body request the organizations which they represent here [illegible] in the matter, so that there can be no doubt as to the position of organized labor on the question."

DRAPER PLANT PROTECTED BY ARMED GUARDS

Unemployed Italians Throng the Gates and Uneasiness Is Felt.

HOPEDALE, Jan. 7.—Because of the presence of discharged Italians about the works of the Draper company clamoring for employment and the report that they displayed the red flag during a street parade, the officials of the company are taking extra precautions to protect the plant at night. Armed guards patrol all parts of the grounds. Workmen who are still employed at the plant had difficulty in getting through the crowd of Italians at the gates.

About twelve hundred men are now employed by the Draper company out of a force of 2,800 usually employed. Those who have been given work are employed on short time, forty hours a week, working only five days.

Since their discharge some weeks ago owing to depression in business at the Draper plant, as was announced by Superintendent Nutting, the Italians make a daily call at the works and ask to be employed. Superintendent Nutting says that he anticipates no trouble, that the Italians appear to be good natured.

FIND BARGAINS AT VORENBERG'S

The first influx of shoppers filled Vorenberg's novelty store at No. 15 Winter street today, seeking early choice among the "percentage bargains," which are to be maintained through the week.

The expression, "percentage bargains," is put in quotation marks, as it is a Vorenberg institution and one worthy of additional comment.

Seven years ago a policy in regard to mark-down sales was established at Vorenberg's, which has been strictly adhered to ever since. Under this policy the price marked on the goods before the sale remains the same. But the customer is allowed to make a percentage discount from the marked price. At this present sale that percentage discount varies from 25 to 50 per cent., according to the value of the article in question.

This stock is not, by the way, made up of shopworn goods, odd lines and articles now out of season. Its various lines are strictly up-to-date and of high grade, both in staples and novelties.

So the customer for the rest of the week is afforded opportunity to secure unusually desirable goods at low purchase price.

EARL'S NEPHEW DIES ACCUSING HIS FATHER

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—H. Grey Duberly, claiming to be a son of Captain James Grey Duberly, of the English navy and a cousin of Earl Grey, Governor-General of Canada, committed suicide in the Hermitage Hotel, Seventh avenue and Forty-second street, by swallowing a narcotic poison.

Among other letters, including one to Earl Grey, which the suicide left on the [illegible] in his room, was the following:

Captain James Grey Duberly, R. N.,
West [illegible], West Calder.

To My Father:

By the time you receive this letter I shall be no more. You killed my mother, and you have compelled me to commit suicide. May God have mercy on your soul. Had you treated me as a father should treat a son, things would have been different. I do not want to die cursing you. I forgive you as I hope God will forgive me. I hope you will treat the rest of the children better than you have me. Your son,

HARRY GREY DUBERLY.

The letter to Earl Grey was sealed and is held in the custody of Coroner Dooley, but another letter, no less dramatic than the above, was addressed to Hon. Mrs. Hugh Mostyn, Buckworth rectory, Huntingdon, England, and reads as follows:

My Dear Aunt Ellen:

Just a line to say good-bye. In a few hours I shall be dead. My father killed my mother and he has forced me to [illegible]. Will you and Uncle Hugh pray for my soul? With best love.

Your affectionate nephew,

HARRY GREY DUBERLY.

Two other letters were also left by the suicide, both sealed, as was the letter to Earl Grey, and addressed one to "The Lady St. John, Melbourne Park, Bedford, England," the other to "Miss Amy [illegible], Care of W. H. Newcombe, Niagara Falls, Ontario, Canada."

Whatever the story of family disruption, unrequited love or blasted hopes may rest behind this astonishing act of self murder, it is evident that the pinch of poverty was directly responsible. Just five cents were found on the person of this young scion of a house close to royalty when the police took charge of his body.

NEW METHOD OF PUTTING ON WEIGHT

Secretary Stebbins of the Civil Service Commission has found a new method for putting on weight. And the beauty of it is it doesn't require any dieting and you can put on as much or as little as you please and any time you want to. You can weigh 300 pounds at 3 o'clock and be down to 275 or 250 five minutes later.

Mr. Stebbins's discovery, while a wonder, cost one young man a life position. The young man in question was an applicant for a place as postal clerk. He was below the required weight and was given some time to come up to the standard.

The young man devised the new weight making scheme. He secured some sheet lead and wrapped portions of this around his arms, legs and body until he thought he would just about tip the scales at the right figure.

When weighing in time came, however, it was found that he was some pounds over and Mr. Stebbins, after some inquiries, made his discovery.

DRUMMERS OF CAPE COD CLUB DINE SATURDAY

The twenty-fifth annual meeting and banquet of the Cape Cod Commercial Travelers' Association will be held at the Quincy House Saturday afternoon and evening.

Secretary Knowles of the association has sent out a circular to the members and friends of the society in which he has outlined the plans of the club for the ensuing year and at the same time impressing upon them the importance of [illegible] the business meeting to be held at 3 o'clock Saturday, when officers will be elected.

Following the business meeting, which will in all probability last three hours, a short recess will be taken, after which the members will assemble in the banquet hall of the hotel, where dinner will be served. The post-prandial exercises include addresses by the Hon. Robert Luce of Somerville, Hon. Eben S. Keith and Hon. T. A. Pattison, members of the Legislature, and Thomas W. Lawson.

HOSPITAL FIRE; 450 LIVES ARE SAVED BY NUNS

Heroic Sisters Avert Panic Among Young Children and Rescue 75 Patients.

PRIESTS AID IN WORK

MANCHESTER, N. H., Jan. 7.—The heroic work on the part of the Grey Nuns in charge of the Notre Dame Hospital, assisted by the priests from St. Marie's Church and a number of doctors and nurses saved the lives of more than 450 persons from death by fire.

A panic among the children of the school connected with the hospital was narrowly averted and as all the pupils are under seven years of age the feat seems almost miraculous.

In addition to the children there were seventy-three patients in the hospital department and three of these were still under ether in the operating room, but they were carried out in safety.

Sixteen others were helpless on their cots, but they, too, were taken out and placed in the sisters' department.

The fire started in the kindergarten, where the children had gathered to enjoy their Christmas tree festivities. In some unknown manner the tree was set on fire and spread rapidly to the partitions.

Some of the sisters hurried the children from the building, while others rushed to the bedside of patients and moved them to a place of safety.

The building is a four-story structure, the first floor being used as the school room, while the second floor is taken up by the doctors and the hospital wards. These were the only two floors damaged.

HYDE PARK POLICE BALL TO-MORROW

The second annual concert and ball of the Hyde Park Police Relief Association will take place to-morrow night in Waverly Hall, Hyde Park. There will be a concert by the Wollaston Glee Club from 8 to 10 o'clock, followed by dancing from 10 to 2 o'clock. Lieutenant Robert E. Grant will be floor director, assisted by these patrolmen as aids: Robert M. Sampson, Thomas J. Meighan, Edward J. Walsh, James W. [illegible] and George H. Tucker.

WHITMORE IS ACCUSED OF KILLING WIFE

Police Make Formal Death Charge Against Husband of Swamp Victim.

POLICE SEEKING A GIRL

HARRISON, N. J., Jan. 7.—The police to-day for the first time directly charged Theodore S. Whitmore with the murder of his wife on Christmas night. Chief Rogers insists that he has evidence enough to convict, and will endeavor to secure the indictment of the accused on a first degree charge at once. He declines, however, to clear up the mystery surrounding the placing of the body in the Lampblack swamp, intimating that, while he knows all about it, that very fact will be part of the strongest evidence against Whitmore. The chief also stated that he has solved the question of accomplices, and knows just who aided Whitmore in his crime.

Five Arrests Now Made.

Five arrests have been made in the tragedy. They are Whitmore, Harry Hendrickson, friend of the murdered woman, John Foster, who spied on Mrs. Whitmore at the request of her husband, Albert Thompson and Frederick Kirkman.

Rumor here has it that one of the six has confessed and that the police are withholding the facts in order that they may make two more arrests. Who the much wanted people are is a closely guarded secret. It is known that the authorities would like to talk with Georgie Dickinson, a woman friend of Whitmore's, as they think she might be able to throw light on his movements from Christmas Day until the Sunday following.

Fred W. Elliott, the locomotive fireman that Whitmore declares was with him Christmas night, has turned up and calmly declares Whitmore lied. Elliott declares he was not in New York until the Thursday night after Christmas, which was after the body was found, and can easily prove that fact.

Irene Cook, sister of Georgia Dickinson, told the police to-day she knew Whitmore well.

"Whitmore was constantly making threats against his wife," she said. "He said in my presence one day while talking to Georgia about the money his wife had: 'I'll get her money if I have to shed blood for it.' And then he promised Georgie many nice things when he got it."

ELLIOT, NAMED BY WHITMORE, SAYS HE WILL PROVE ALIBI

Fred W. Elliott, a Boston & Albany brakeman, whose name has been mentioned during the investigation of the murder of Mrs. Theodore S. Whitmore of Brooklyn, in Lampblack swamp, Harrison, N. J., on Christmas Day, has been located at his home in Newton. To-day he starts for New York where he says he will tell his story to the District Attorney in order to prove that at the time the murder is supposed to have taken place he was in Boston.

Theodore S. Whitmore, husband of the murdered woman, now under arrest in New York, has declared that a few days before Christmas he met Elliott in Brooklyn and invited him to Brooklyn for a visit. He has told the police that Elliott was with him from the day after Christmas until the following Saturday. Elliott says he understands that Whitmore has also stated that they were together Christmas Day. These statements he denies, and says he can prove an alibi. He declares he had not seen Whitmore for two years until the day after Christmas.

Members of the train crew with whom Elliott says he rode to New York corroborate his statements. E. L. York, baggage man of the parlor and sleeping car service, says he is positive Elliott rode on his train Christmas night. At the Continental Hotel, Charles J. Lavis, one of the proprietors, says he remembers a business transaction he had with Elliott on Christmas night. He says Elliott was at the hotel all the evening. Michael J. McDonough, a waiter, says he remembers serving drinks to Elliott during the evening.

MYSTERY IN SECRETING OF STEELE REPORT

In spite of the fact that the Board of Insanity has completed its report on the Steele shooting at the State House and that several days have passed since the finding of the board was placed in the hands of Governor Guild, nothing has yet been made public.

Just what the Governor's reason for holding this report from the public is no one has yet been able to determine. It is understood that when the Board of Insanity made its report to Governor Guild it was with the understanding that it would be made public. The members are now beginning to wonder just what has become of their finding and if the Governor intends to ever make it public.

CANAL CHIEF VISITS CLINTON

The importance of Massachusetts in engineering work has led the government to send Lieutenant-Colonel George W. Goethals, chairman and chief engineer of the Panama Canal Commission, here to inspect some of the important engineering feats. Colonel Goethals to-day visits the Wachusett dam at Clinton, the reservoir of which to some extent served as a model for the dam at Gatun, Panama.

Yesterday, accompanied by Dexter Brackett and Frederick P. Stearns, former chief engineer of the Metropolitan Water Board, Colonel Goethals inspected the Charles River dam and lock, and was especially interested in the rolling lock gate, the plan of which may be adopted for the locks at Panama.

THRILLING RESCUES AS GREENOCK INN BURNS

FIERCE BLAZE REDUCES FAMOUS LEE HOSTELRY TO MASS OF RUINS.

Special to the Boston American.

LEE, Jan. 7.—Within two hours and a quarter the famous Greenock Inn here, the property of the Lee Hotel Company, was burned to the ground, and serious loss of life was avoided only by the heroic exertions of the present manager, Henry C. Savage, aided by firemen and men guests of the hotel. No less than four daring rescues were made while the great Summer hostelry was being consumed by the flames.

Mr. Savage himself was awakened at 5.45 a. m. by an overpowering smell of burning wood and choking clouds of smoke. He sounded the alarm and Night Clerk Dwight C. Loveland telephoned the alarm to the Lee fire department.

Savage Alarms Guests.

Rushing through the corridors, banging at the doors, Mr. Savage and Clerk Loveland aroused the thirty-five or more guests of the establishment. So soon were the guests alarmed that most of them escaped down the stairways and to places of safety without actual danger, but few remained to clothe themselves properly or to secure much of their property.

Mrs. H. M. White, wife of the editor of the Lee Gleaner, who has been confined to her room on the third floor of the hotel for some time by illness, was carried through smoke-choked corridors to the street by her husband and Night Clerk Loveland.

Mr. and Mrs. White lived in the southeasterly wing of the hotel, where the fire first broke out, and the rescue was made in the nick of time, for in a moment after the two men rushed from the wing bearing the sick woman in their arms the fire closed in after them with a roar.

Mrs. M. J. Spencer, who occupied a room on the second floor, was carried from the fast-burning building by L. J. Hulan, one of the guests of the establishment. Mr. Hulan heard Mrs. Spencer's cries and rushed to her assistance. She was trying to escape from her room into the hall, but the dense clouds of smoke each time drove her back in fright.

The wife and two-year-old child of Mr. Savage, the manager of the hotel, were carried from their room on the second floor by Mr. Savage and one of the hotel employes.

Bonaparte First Guest

The Greenock, valued at $50,000, was opened in 1903, and the then Secretary of the Navy, Charles J. Bonaparte, now Attorney-General, was the first guest to register.

At 8 o'clock the fire had burned itself out and the great establishment was a complete wreck. The Lee fire department arrived at 6.15 o'clock and did good work in saving adjoining buildings from destruction.

The insurance on the building is $[illegible] and on the furnishings $7,500 was carried. Mr. Savage said that the hotel would be rebuilt at once.

Among the guests who fled from the burning hotel were Mr. and Mrs. Charles de Baun of New York City, Mrs. Gaylord Logan and daughter of Albany, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Lamont of New York city, the Rev. D. N. Lesknow, a Baptist missionary of Boston, and Mrs. J. H. Roberts and son of Lancashire, England.

Lee People Among Guests.

Most of the other guests of the hotel were Lee people who preferred to make their home in the hotel during the Winter months.

The hotel was three stories in height. The Lee Hotel Company is composed of G. T. Gilmore of Lee, president; James O'Brien of Lee, secretary; John Van Huyck of Lee, treasurer, and W. T. Benton, Mark P. Robbins, H. W. Stevens, Peter de Baun, directors.

The fire caught from an overheated flue in the southeastern wing of the building near the roof and burned rapidly down into the structure.

KENNEDY IS SATISFIED

John P. Kennedy, representing organized labor upon the Finance Commission, said to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter in regard to his exoneration by the Central Labor Union after it had investigated charges against him made by Senator Frank J. Linehan:

"I am thoroughly satisfied with the report of the executive board of the Central Labor Union. I simply asked for an investigation. I simply sought vindication, not revenge. The committee faithfully discharged its duty and the incident is closed, so far as I am concerned."

Following statements made concerning contract work being done at Deer Island, Senator Linehan accused Mr. Kennedy, who had gone to the island to investigate on behalf of the Central Labor Union, to which both men are delegates. The committee which investigated at Mr. Kennedy's request rendered an exoneration report Sunday.

Loses 40 Pounds of Flesh in 40 Days.

Rengo, the Great Fat Reducer, Bring Happiness to Battle Creek Woman.

As an ordinary illustration of the wonderful results of "Rengo," mention is here made of the case of Mrs. Ada L. Erskine, who lives at [illegible] East Main street, Battle Creek, Mich.

Here is her loss in weight, bust and waist measurement:

Before.	After.
Weight 237 pounds	197 pounds
Waist 37 inches	34 inches
Bust 44 inches	40 inches

The following is a letter written by Mrs. Erskine to the Rengo Co. at the end of only 40 days' treatment:

"I can hardly believe my eyes when I look at myself now and realize how fat and unsightly I was not over two months ago. I feel as though I was in a new world. I feel so light and strong. It is all due to Rengo. I started it with little hope that I could ever get thin by it, because I had taken so many other things and failed every time. I did not miss a day while taking Rengo. I guess that was because it tastes so much like delicious candy.

"Every day that I lost flesh I felt myself getting more strength, so that today I can lift a great deal more, can do more work, walk upstairs quickly without getting tired, and do almost everything with the same energy and delight as when I was a girl. I am simply feeling fine, and if I can't do any more than write you this letter, I certainly owe it to you to allow any fat person, who wants to place his or her confidence in some one and be reduced, to write to me and find out the truth.

"With lasting gratitude to you and Rengo, I am, yours cordially, Ada L. Erskine."

This same experience can happen to you if you are over-fat. You will be stronger, healthier and happier.

There is nothing "just as good" as Rengo. For sale by all druggists at $1.00 per full sized box, or by mail prepaid, by The Rengo Co., 3212 Rengo Bldg., Detroit, Mich. The company will gladly send you a trial package free by mail, if you write them direct to Detroit; no free packages at drug stores.

ROCKEFELLER WITHDRAWS AID FROM CHARITY

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—Because John D. Rockefeller refused to renew his donation of $7,500 this year, the Committee for the Prevention of Tuberculosis of the Charity Organization Society has announced that it would be compelled to abandon its work on the East Side.

Last year Mr. Rockefeller gave that amount on condition that the committee raise $2,000 for the work. The sum was subscribed and the committee was able to look after 300 cases of consumption, besides spreading much information among the residents, which is known to have prevented many cases [illegible].

This year, however, according to other subscribers, Mr. Rockefeller was paying so much attention and money to his institute for medical research, that the committee's appeal for a second donation was unheeded. The committee therefore declined to call upon the other subscribers, as they had promised second gifts [illegible] the belief that Mr. Rockefeller was to head the list. In consequence there will be no funds for the continuation of the anti-consumption crusade.

Among the other subscribers were Andrew Carnegie, Harvey W. [illegible], Edward S. Harkness, John S. [illegible], Grant A. Schley, V. E. Macy and Robert S. Brewster.

BOY ARRESTED FOR SALVATION ARMY BLAZE

Special to the Boston American.

WORCESTER, Jan. 7.—Because he told conflicting stories about the discovery of the fire which destroyed the Salvation Army lodging house in Washington square early today, Charles Goodland, aged [illegible]teen years, who acted as night clerk and watchman, was arrested by the police on the charge of criminal negligence. One death resulted from the blaze, that of Fenton Dranes, a cripple, who was unable to escape in the mad rush of the other inmates.

Young Goodland, who is the son of Captain Goodland, the officer of the Salvation Army in charge of the lodging house, according to the police, first claimed to have pulled in an alarm, then that he notified a police officer and finally that he saw the smoke some time before the alarm was given.

Investigation of the fire shows that it was undoubtedly set on the back stairs by some person who broke through a side window.

Worldly Woman's Maxims

By Dorothy Dix

BLESS Heaven for fools. They make wise people's opportunities.

Propinquity is the great matchmaker—and the first aid to divorce.

* * *

A woman never gets too old to relish flattery—even her false teeth are sweet ones.

* * *

There are women who set up a personal deity as they do an automobile, and brag of the proprietorship of the one as familiarly as they do of the other.

* * *

Women never get over being surprised at the explosion that follows when they apply fire to gunpowder.

* * *

The greatest discourager of the domestic virtues is the fact that the selfish wife and mother gets ten times the affection and consideration that the self-abnegated saint receives.

* * *

Most first wives toil and economize in order that their husbands' second wives may keep three servants and wear imported gowns.

* * *

When you speak before a woman's club it is better to wear real lace and diamonds than to have the eloquence of Demosthenes and the wisdom of Solomon.

* * *

Parents nearly always forgive their prodigal children and slay the fatted calf for them upon their return; but there is no record of any veal ever being killed by children to celebrate the homecoming of their prodigal parents.

* * *

There is no judgment so cruel as that of the young who have not known life, and the good who have never experienced temptation.

* * *

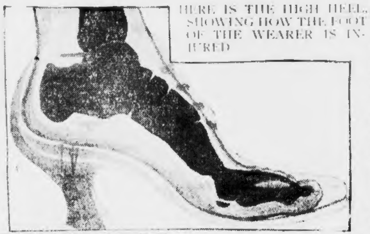
The real reason that women wish to be men is because it's no reflection on a man's character to get fat and bald.

* * *

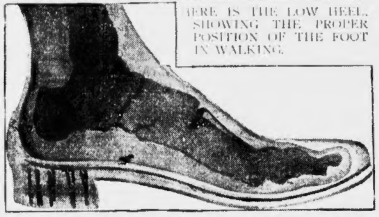
If women would devote as much time to learning how to grow old [illegible]lly as they do to trying to keep [illegible] unsuccessfully, the world would [illegible]ller of beauty and peace.

How High Heels Ruin the Feet

These X-Ray Pictures Show What Women Gain and Lose by Wearing High Heels on Shoes



HERE IS THE HIGH HEEL, SHOWING HOW THE FOOT OF THE WEARER IS INJURED



HERE IS THE LOW HEEL, SHOWING THE PROPER POSITION OF THE FOOT IN WALKING.

THESE two photographs ought to convince any woman who is not a blind slave of fashion of the danger that lurks in the high-heeled street shoe. The pictures are self-explanatory. The light shade in the pictures is the shoe, the darker shade inside of the lighter is the flesh of the foot, the darkest being the bone structure.

WHAT A WOMAN GAINS BY HIGH HEELS—They improve the appearance of the foot from an esthetic point of view, give the much coveted arched instep effect and actually shorten the foot half an inch or more and add to the height of the wearer an inch or more.

WHAT A WOMAN LOSES BY HIGH HEELS—They cause bodily discomfort, a feeling of tiredness and irritability, throw the body out of equilibrium and force the chest in, which prevents proper breathing. Lessened lung capacity results and the person becomes listless, then weak, then an invalid.

Wise Mothers Are Good Chums With Their Daughters

By Arletta B. Canfield

IF the mothers in Boston only knew how much it means to have the confidence of their daughters they would do much to secure it.

The mother who has grown too old to be a companion to her daughter wilfully thrusts that daughter from her and into the gravest of dangers.

Who should be so capable of advising and sympathizing with a young girl just venturing a little way in the pathway of love as the mother who has traversed the road to its end?

Every mother has it in her power to fasten herself so firmly in the heartstrings of her daughter that she feels the first throb of that organ as it jumps for joy at the dawn of love. Then is her chance to guide and direct.

Sad as it is to relate, it is no less true that few mothers have the confidence of their girls. In fact, these girls will go to any one else rather than to "Mother" through fear of censure.

If you would keep your children, both boys and girls, with you in heart, be companions to them instead of dragons who, from their point of view, were created only to thwart every desire and every hope of their childhood.

Get Off Your Stilts

GET down to their level and get off your stilts of superior knowledge. Don't forget so soon that you were once young yourselves. Listen to all their childish joys and griefs, sympathizing and adroitly leading them to see things aright.

A child's griefs are just as great to it as are yours, for they are the very worst that have come to it and are superlative. Don't crush the heart and drive the child away from you by laughing at its little confidences.

Encourage their evidence of faith in you and never scold a child for what it voluntarily comes to you and confides.

If you are thus wise, as your daughter grows up she will come to you with her first love confidences and not be ashamed to tell you all about the affair.

How often is heard the remark among girls, "Oh, I wouldn't tell my mother for anything in the world!" Why? Simply because the mother would probably scold for all she was worth because the girl did not know how on the spur of the moment to act when conditions arose about which she knew nothing.

Give Her Advice

I LEAVE it to you, mothers, if you would not, almost every one of you, scold your young daughter if she came to you and told you that one of her boy companions had kissed her and that she was so embarrassed she did not know how to repulse him.

You would be horrified that a daughter of yours would be so forward and would tell her so in accents none too mild.

Now, if you are wise, you will tell her that she was right to be indignant, but that you know what that embarrassment meant, as you had gone through it yourself, and then suggest to her how to act in future under similar conditions, saying nothing of what she did in the past.

The minute you freeze up the stream of confidence which should flow uninterruptedly from her heart to you, you have placed her in danger.

I venture to say that could the lives of most of our unfortunate sisters be traced and the source of their sinning be located, it would be in the starvation caused by lack of help because they dared not tell of the first temptations.

Will Meet Temptation

DON'T think for a minute that your girl, no matter how closely sheltered she is at home, is not going to be subjected to temptation. She is, and if you yourself have thrown away the rudder to guide her back to safety you are more to blame than she if it is wrecked on a rocky coast.

Don't yourself open the way for your girls to deceive you, but make them understand that there is nothing which they cannot confide in mother. She will guide them, not from the viewpoint of a cynical world, but from that of love and loyalty.

Scold less and love more would be a good maxim for many mothers. You cannot begin too soon, for if you do not have the confidence of the babies you cannot command it from them as they add to their stature.

Handy Things for Housewives to Know

MANY steam radiators have no provision for catching water that drops when air is drawn from them, which, if it is allowed to drip on floor or carpet, does more or less damage. A small bottle hung to the air-cock catches the drip and is not unsightly.

* * *

To clean cut glass wash thoroughly with warm soap suds and cover with sawdust for an hour or two, or until perfectly dry, then brush off with a soft brush, and it will be clear and sparkling.

* * *

Faded, shabby carpets can be freshened and improved if, after first brushing to remove the dust, the brush be dipped in a pail of hot water to which a few drops of turpentine have been added and the carpet brushed vigorously over with this.

* * *

A dainty handkerchief bag may be made with a cardboard bottom, 4½ inches square, which is covered with white India silk, the inner surface being wadded and scented. The bag sewed to this is of crochet, worked in white silk of any open pattern. Shell work in successive rows is pretty and easily made. The work is made six inches deep and finished at the top with a scalloped border. Below this narrow white satin ribbons are run through the work for drawing strings.

* * *

Now that the humble wrapper is a back number the home dressmaker develops her talent for making artistic house gowns which are both comfortable and sightly. Crepe in delicate shades makes an ideal material for a gown in which the tired woman may appear dainty at dinner instead of choosing between the extremes of "dressing up" or looking sloppy. Make the "baby waist" or the waist with surplice effect with a shortened waist line, and let the slightly full skirt fall from the waist in straight clinging folds with several tucks at the bottom to give the desired weight. The skirt and bodice may be joined, each being attached to a belt which may be plain or embroidered silk, thus making it possible to don the garment in a minute after the dinner is cooked. Cuffs and collars of dainty embroidered lawn can be attached before band.

* * *

Take two tin boxes three inches long and six inches around, with a perforated cover. Make a nail hole in the centre of the bottom, put them both in a large dish of water. Get your clothes ready to sprinkle, take one out of the water and with your first finger over the hole in the bottom you can sprinkle the clothes better than any other way. Try it and you will never use any other.

* * *

To relieve a bad headache try a cloth wrung out in hot water and vinegar and laid across the forehead as hot as can be borne. It is an excellent remedy. Another good plan is to bathe the nape of the neck with hot water and cologne.

HIS WIFE NEVER DOES ANYTHING RIGHT

Be Economical; But Be Sensible About It

TAKE care to economize in the right place. There are economies that are economies and economies that are rank extravagances.

Of the former, saving time and energy wherever you can.

Of the latter, the following may serve to illustrate: Eating a thing to save it; walking to save carfare when time is money; saving gas at the expense of the eyesight; doing unnecessary manual labor (washing and sweeping, for example) at the expense of health.

There are many ways in which a clever and artistic woman may earn money to pay for this hard work to some worthy person who desires it and makes a business of it.

A wise expenditure of these three—energy, time and money—marks the well-rounded character.

There are two old sayings about money that have been repeated so often as to have become almost meaningless: "A penny saved is a penny earned" and "Do not be penny wise and pound foolish."

When penny saving does not degenerate into miserliness and a consequent dwarfing of soul-power, and when pound-foolishness does not develop into meaningless extravagance, then are they both commendable.

To save pennies for the sake of having pounds of dollars to spend for some desirable and desired necessity or luxury, is wise economy. A wise spender does not indulge in a lot of cheap or unnecessary trifles, bought without first taking thought, but saves for the really useful and desirable things. He is a thrifty spender and not a spendthrift.

Expert Advice on Health and Beauty

TO WHITEN HANDS

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Will you please tell me of something that will whiten my hands? When it's nice and warm my hands are white and smooth, but as soon as the cold weather comes they are red and rough. X. Y. Z.

EVIDENTLY your circulation is not what it should be if the redness of the hands is not caused by rough work. Try the finger exercise, which, after relaxing the fingers and wrists, flings the blood to the ends of the fingers by a motion similar to that of throwing water from their ends. Keep this up until the blood seems to be ready to burst from the tips. Also swing the arm around in a circle from front to back, using the ball-and-socket joint of the shoulder as a centre. For outward application use lemon juice, glycerine or honey and rosewater in equal quantities and avoid hot water and coarse soap as much as possible.

THICK LIPS AND THIN FACE

DEAR PROFESSOR:

What will make thick lips thin and keep them thin, and what will make a thin face fat without growing hair on it? GRACE.

THERE is nothing but the surgeon's knife that will make thick lips thin. You may help the situation by the manner of holding the muscles about the mouth and you might try by the aid of a mirror which muscles would help to hold in the surplus flesh when tightened. Then by training them to the habit of staying in the position desired there might be some result. That is, of course, for the large, pendulous lip. Massage the face with a cream which contains no animal fats, using little circular movements and slapping the flesh gently, thus arousing the circulation sufficiently to cause the blood to absorb the cream.

"AN AMBITIOUS MAN"

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

CHAPTER IX.—Continued

Copyright by Ella Wheeler Wilcox.
Copyright, 1907, by American Journal Examiner.

AGAIN the organ pealed forth, this time in that passionate music originally written for the garden scene in "Faust," and which the church has boldly taken and arranged as a quartet to the words, "Come unto Me."

It may be that to some who listen, it is the Divine spirit which makes its appeal through those stirring strains; but to the rector of St. Blank's, at least on that morning, it was human heart, calling unto human heart. Mr. Stuart and the deacons sat silently drinking in the music.

At length the rector rose. "I think perhaps we had better drop the matter under discussion for to-day," he said. "We can meet here Monday evening at 5 o'clock if agreeable to you all, and finish the details. There are now other and more important affairs waiting for me now."

The deacons departed, and the young rector sank back in his chair and gave himself up to the enjoyment of the sounds which flooded not only the room, but his brain, heart and soul.

"Queer," he said to himself as the door closed behind the human pillars of his church. "Queer, but I feel as if the presence of those men was an intrusion upon something belonging personally to me. I wonder why I am so peculiarly affected by this girl's music? It arouses my brain to action, it awakens ambition and gives me courage and hope, and yet——" he paused before allowing his feeling to shape itself into thoughts. Then, closing his eyes and clasping his hands behind his head while the music surged about him, he lay back in his easy chair as a bather might lie back and float upon the water, and his unfinished sentence took shape thus: "And yet stronger than all other feelings which her music arouses in me is love for the musician; ah, well! the Roman Catholics are wise in not allowing their priests and their nuns to listen to all even so-called sacred music."

It was perhaps ten minutes later that Joy Irving became conscious that she was not alone in the organ loft. She had neither heard nor seen his entrance, but she felt the presence of her rector and turned to find him silently watching her. She played her phrase to the end before she greeted him with other than a smile.

Then she was apologetic, saying: "Even one's rector must wait for a musical phrase to reach its period. Angels may interrupt the rendition of a great work, but not man. That were sacrilege. You see I was really praying, when you entered, though my heart spoke through my fingers instead of my lips."

"You need not apologize," the young man answered. "One who receives your smile would be ungrateful indeed if he asked for more. That alone would render the darkest spot radiant with light and welcome to me."

The girl's pink cheek flushed crimson, like a rose bathed in the sunset colors of the sky.

"I did not think you were a man to coin pretty speeches," she said.

"Your estimate of me was a wise one. You read human nature correctly. But come and walk in the park with me. You will overtax yourself if you practice any longer. The sunlight and the air are vying with each other today to see which can be the most intoxicating. Come and enjoy their sparring match with me. I want to talk to you about one of my unfortunate parishioners. It is a peculiarly pathetic case. I think you can help and advise me in the matter."

An Invitation

It was a superb morning in early October. New York was like a beautiful woman attired in her fresh Autumn costume, disporting herself before admiring eyes.

Absorbed in each other's society, their pulses beating high with youth, love and health, the young couple walked through the crowded avenues of the great city, as happily and as naturally as Adam and Eve might have walked in the Garden of Eden the morning after the Creation.

Both were city born and city bred, yet both were as unfashionable and untrammeled by customs as two children of the plains.

In the very heart of the greatest metropolis in America, there are people who live and retain all the primitive simplicity of village life and thought. Mr. Irving had been one of these. Coming to New York from an interior village when a young man, he had, through simple and quiet tastes and religious convictions, kept himself wholly free from the social life of the city in which he lived.

After his marriage his entire happiness lay in his home, and Joy was reared by parents who made her world. Mrs. Irving sympathized fully with her husband in his distaste for society, and her delicate health rendered her almost a recluse from the world.

A few pleasant acquaintances, no intimates, music, books, and a large share of her time given to charitable work, composed the life of Joy Irving.

She had never been in a fashionable assemblage; she had never attended a theatre, as Mr. Irving did not approve of them.

Extremely fond of outdoor life, she walked, unattended, wherever her mood led her. As she had no acquaintances among society people, she knew nothing and cared less for the rules which govern the promenading habits of young women in New York. Her sweet face and graceful figure were well known among the poorer quarters of the city, and it was through her work in such places that Arthur Stuart's attention had first been called to her.

As for him, he was filled with that high, but not always wise, disdain for society and its customs, which we so often find in town bred young men of intellectual pursuits. He was clean minded, independent, sure of his own purposes, and wholly indifferent to the opinions of inferiors regarding his habits.

He loved the Park, and he asked Joy to walk with him there, as freely as he would have asked her to sit with him in a conservatory. It was a great delight to the young girl to go.

"Cowardly!"

"It seems such a pity that the women of New York get so little benefit from this beautiful park," she said as they strolled along through the winding paths together. "The wealthy people enjoy it in a way from their carriages, and the poor people no doubt derive new life from their Sunday promenades here. But there are thousands like myself who are almost wholly debarred from its pleasures. I have always wanted to walk here, but once I came and a rude man in a carriage spoke to me. Mother told me never to come alone again. It seems strange to me that men who are so proud of their strength, and who should be the natural protectors of woman, can little themselves by annoying or frightening her when alone. I am sure that same man would never think of speaking to me now that I am with you. How cowardly he seems when you think of it! Yet I am told there are many like him, though that was my only experience of the kind."

"Yes, there are many like him," the rector answered. "But you must remember how short a time man has been evolving from a lower animal condition to his present state, and how much higher he is to-day than he was a hundred years ago even, when occasional drunkenness was considered an attribute of a gentleman. Now it is a vice of which he is ashamed."

"Then you believe in evolution?" Joy asked, with a note of surprise in her voice.

"Yes, I surely do; nor does the belief conflict with my religious faith. I believe in many things I could not preach from my pulpit. My congregation is not ready for broad truths. I am like an eclectic physician. I suit my treatment to my patient. I administer the old school or the new school medicaments as the case demands."

"It seems to me there can be but one school in spiritual matters," Joy said, gravely, "the right one. And I think one should preach and teach what he believes to be true and right, no matter what his congregation demands. Oh, forgive me! I am very rude to speak like that to you!" And she blushed and paled with fright at her boldness.

They were seated on a rustic bench now, under the shadow of a great tree.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

NO REASON TO WAIT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man twenty-two years old and am engaged to a young lady of the same age. I know this young lady for the past four years and she has helped me very much in all my undertakings in the way of courage, etc. I have also succeeded in saving up a good deal of money through her help. I am at present earning $2,000 a year, but expect to go into business after we are married.

Now, I have an older sister, who is also engaged and has her wedding date settled for eight months from now. My lady friend wants me to be married in a few months, as we have settled to be married then; but we expected my sister to be married before us. Now there is trouble. My parents and sisters are very much opposed to our being married before my sister, and say they will not come to our wedding; but my friend has no home and no place where she can live in ease, so that she does not want to wait until one month after my sister's wedding, that is, nine months from now.

My parents are not in good circumstances and I help them all I can and expect to do so after I am married, but they fear that my wife will not let me help them after we are married, and so they wish to prolong our wedding day as much as possible.

I love this young lady dearly, and I also like my parents very much, so I do not know what to do, and we have left it for you to decide. Shall we be married at our settled date or wait until after my sister is married?

TROUBLED.

I DO not see any reason why you should wait until after your sister's wedding. Tell your parents that you will continue to help them as much as possible. You must make them realize that you have the right to judge for yourself in such an important matter as this. Do as you and your fiancee think best.

LESSON OF FORGETTING

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

About two years ago I became acquainted with a young man who acted very kind to me, and whose kindness I feel I can never repay, even though he has acted rudely since. One evening this young man called on me without sending word beforehand, and I happened to be out. I wrote him a short, friendly note, stating that I was very sorry I was not at home to receive him. I never received any answer. In the meantime I met a friend of his who told me he was very "well off," and that he didn't care to call on me, as I was too poorly situated. I am the support of a family of five, although but eighteen years of age. Now, Miss Fairfax, don't you really think he ought to be courteous enough to answer my letter, and will you also kindly advise me how to forget him? One minute I scorn him for being so mean and the next minute I find myself praying for his welfare. L. B.

MY poor little girl, if I could teach women how to forget the men who have been faithless to them I would, indeed, be fortunate. Nothing but time and work can help you to forget. If he is the kind of man your friend says he is, he is not worth remembering. No one but a snob would feel that way toward a girl who was doing the work that you are. Cheer up, little friend, and try your best to think of him as little as possible.

"TOM JONES" IS ONE ROUND OF PLEASURE

Comic Opera From Fielding's Book Makes Instant Hit at the Tremont.

Fielding would hardly have recognized his hero, "Tom Jones," had he been sitting at the Tremont Theatre last night, for he is now an operatic hero, and operatic heroes are different from those in books or in real life. But it is a safe bet that Fielding would have enjoyed himself at the unraveling of the story, at the delicious music which Edward German has given it, and at the unusually capable interpretation of it by an unusually capable company, headed by William Norris and three Boston girls, Louise Gunning, Gertrude Quinlan and May Mooney.

"Tom Jones," the comic opera, is one round of pleasure. Its story is logical, interesting and gives ample opportunity for both sentiment and comedy. Sentiment rules the first act. Then Norris arrives with Lizzie, and then it is a rapid fire of fun. Lizzie is a silent feature, and to tell the story of her escape would be to spoil the fun which one must really see to enjoy. Lizzie is "it" even at the finale.

That trio of Boston girls cannot be beaten. Gertrude Quinlan sings, dances and flirts as "Honour" with delicious abandon; Miss Gunning looks pretty, acts with understanding and sings divinely, and her solo in the third act was given three encores last night. Now if some manager will only give May Mooney more opportunity to sing and display her remarkable beauty, the American stage will benefit, for as Lady Bellaston she hasn't half enough to do, but she does that little so well that everybody in the audience is speaking in praise of her as they pass out.

Musically, "Tom Jones" is a relief. There is none of the slapdash bill-bang about it, but it is sweet, refreshing and typically Old English and yet it seems unusually up-to-date, too. Mr. Norris has a very laughable song, full of novelties, in "King Neptune," in which the chorus largely figures. And, by the way, the "Tom Jones" chorus is remarkable. Every member is good looking, knows how to act and knows how to wear the beautiful costumes provided. The cast of principals is strong.

In fact, if one enjoys the real thing in comic operas—clean, wholesome, satisfying and well acted and sung—"Tom Jones" fills the bill. It ought to stay in Boston longer than two weeks, but it cannot.

"ROUND UP" HAS THRILL IN EACH LINE

There's a thrill in every line of "The Round Up," which opened at the Colonial last night. Sensation follows sensation in the tensest sort of quick succession. It's a real, at times even lurid, "meller-drammer" of the genuine old-fashioned variety, magnificently acted and embellished with startlingly realistic and convincingly new devices of stagecraft that puts the play in a class almost by itself.

Set in the barren, arid atmosphere of the Arizona plains are Indians, scouts, cowboys, real bucking ponies, United States troops, vaqueros. There is tragedy upon tragedy, gun play enough to satisfy the wildest dream of the wildest West, a genuine battle—one of the most convincingly real ever staged, thrilling rescues, pathos and comedy, love and revenge—all the old-time ingredients of the "drammer" of thrills, save the "cheeild" and the "pee-apers." Yet nothing is commonplace; nothing is overdone. "The Round Up" fairly bristles with realism.

LILY LENA WINS BY HER CHARM

The bill at the Orpheum this week is simply bubbling over with laughter, humor and pretty dancing. Pretty Lily Lena, the English comedienne, who landed in New York from England some few weeks ago, practically unknown, and who through her charm of manner and her dainty songs sprung into the star class within a week, was the feature of the show, and she was well received. Her English twang and graceful dancing was appreciated. Fred Karno's London Pantomime Company, in "A Night in an English Music Hall," seen here before, kept the house in an uproar. Billy Reeves played the part of an inebriated "gentleman." Adeline Dunlap has a great sketch entitled "The Operator." The scene is laid in a telegraph office, and depicts the harrowing scenes after the lone operator has misinterpreted a message. William H. Dillon, the composer, was one of the features, and his funny antics and ridiculous make-up were pleasing. The Five Madcaps, in their romping, frolicking act, are busy from the start to the finish and get good applause. Hill and Whitaker, musical experts; Harry and Kate Jackson, in a comedy, "His Day Off"; the Kemps, colored singers and dancers of the first water, and the three Macarte Sisters, in an acrobatic dancing act, were among the other features.

"RUFUS RASTUS" BACK AT GLOBE

There is lots of clean, rapid-fire fun at the Globe this week, for Ernest Hogan is back as "Rufus Rastus," the Baltimore "oyster man" who becomes King of the Isle of Blazassus. The fun begins at the Maryland oyster fisheries, but it culminates in the island, where there is a native ruler, a sacred dog, a bunch of naked savages and two generals who represent a "revolutionary army." The immigrants make things lively for the native population, and by and by, in the whirligig of laughable events, the Baltimore oysterman takes his seat on the throne, receiving the homage of the King he has displaced. Ernest Hogan, as the oysterman, is the centre of the fun throughout, and is well supported by the rest of the cast. The comedy ends in a Wild West show, with a colored Buffalo Bill.

"THE TWO ORPHANS" FINELY PRODUCED

Notwithstanding the fact that "The Two Orphans" was first produced by people who are now stars, it was enthusiastically received at the Bowdoin Square yesterday. The production was elaborate and the scenic effects were very artistic. The popularity of Charlotte Hunt was attested plainly at the opening performance, and her appearance was the signal for a generous outburst of applause. She portrayed the role of Henriette. Arthur Maitland appeared as Chevalier de Vaudrey and his conception of that role again demonstrated that he is an actor of many talents. In the role of Louise, the blind girl, Jane Stuart, evoked much enthusiasm. Isabel Sherman was very effective as the Countess.

REAL COSSACKS AT AUSTIN & STONE'S

The troupe of Cossacks yesterday handled their guns with a dexterity that must have phased every Massachusetts militiaman who saw them. They were also seen in the dances and games of their people, and their singing of the national airs was an inspiring novelty. Other attractions were Caffrey and Grant, physical culture exhibition; the La Raes in aerial poses, and the famous Esquimau Chief Debro and his wife on their first visit. There were two splendid shows in the theatre,

BOSTON GIRLS HERE IN OPERA

Louise Gunning, Gertrude Quinlan and May Mooney are featured in the Savage opera, "Tom Jones," which the Tremont offers for its return to its original policy.

GERTRUDE QUNILAN

LOUISE GUNNING

PURE "GEL" GIVES "VILLUN" HIS DUE

Desperate villainy matched against purity and right got a bad setback last night. A little woman, although "Shadowed by Three," won in the struggle at the Grand Opera House, and all came out right in the end. The piece is full of surprises and has a lot of comedy. The latter is largely furnished by Okuni Sand, a Japanese magician. There were also some good specialties, more particularly that of the Electric Comedy Four and Schoenwerk. Theresa Miller had no difficulty in scoring a hit by her capable acting in two difficult roles.

Laughing Bills In Burlesque Houses

Howard Athenaeum

Much interest was taken yesterday in the Burns-Moir fight pictures. Jack Sheehan told the story of that contest as the pictures were shown. The Cherry Blossom Burlesquers were also seen in "Rooster's Millions." In the burlesque olio Lillie Perry, Markey and Moran, Jerge, Aleene and Hamilton, Goff Phillips and Granville and Mack were the features. The house bill was of genuine merit. The program was headed by Matthews and Harris in "Adam the Second"; Gorman and West, as singing comedians; Keegan and Mack, "The Cowboy and the Squaw"; Mr. and Mrs. Larry Shaw, Paul and Carrie Russell, the two Dalys, Pike Brothers, Dave Shaffer and the Howardscope completed the entertainment. The fight pictures will be shown twice daily at 2 and 7:30.

Palace Theatre

Joe Hurtig's "Girl From Happy Land" Company began a week's engagement yesterday and delighted crowded houses. "The Doings of Paris" and "On Ship Board" are full of fun and good music and the action is lively. Among the clever members are Nat Fields, German comedian; Harry Harvey, Hebrew impersonator; Sam Hymas, singer of illustrated songs; the Monarch comedy four; Carrie Seitz, a handsome burlesquer; the Misses Dora and Wolford, singers and whistlers; Magolita, a captivating Spanish girl, and others. The reproduction, with living models of the $100,000 oil painting, "The Deluge," created a sensation. The Palace bill includes Ferris and Marks, Tommy Hayes, Mack brothers, Juggling Delisle and Frothingham and Denham.

Lyceum Theatre

Harry Bryant's extravaganza is one of those busy shows where there are plenty of people all the time doing something that entertains. Harry Bryant himself is a comedian who is really unctuous. Among the vaudeville contingent are the Stella Troupe of English Girls, in a singing and dancing novelty; Charley Harris, in "The Inspector and the Gibson Girl"; Darmody, the dream and club manipulator; Lillian Sieger, cornetist; Elliott, Belair and Elliott, acrobats, and the comedy dispensers, Harry Bryant, John J. Black and Billy K. Wells.

Columbia Theatre

Johnny Weber is little in stature but he is the "biggest scream" that has struck the Columbia this season. In the happy two-act bit of nonsense styled "Suisette" Johnny came pretty near being the limit, his tangled-up English furnishing enough fun to be remembered for a lifetime. The scene is the Latin quarter of Paris and artists and their models abound. Weber is the Dutch millionaire, and his endeavors to be one of the "boys" is the principal cause of the excitement and fun. Blanche Washburn, as the chief model, was the best of the female principals. Beatrice Haynes, a buxom lassie with a pretty face and figure, came in for a good deal of attention in her singing and dancing specialty in the olio. Clarence Marks, a coon shouter, proved another big card. The Bennington brothers, balancers and ring experts; Blanche Washburn and company and John Weber, assisted by Ed Griffin, Grace Graham and Ruth De Shon, were also featured. This evening Lundin and "Strangler" Lewis, Jr., will be seen in the main wrestling bout. Thursday night, after the burlesque show, the Columbia stage will be turned into a basketball court and the Roxbury team will clash with the boys from Brighton. The basketball games will be featured Thursday nights for the remainder of the season, the strongest teams of the State competing.

HUB THEATRE PICTURES.

It is worth the price of admission alone to hear Dave Ballantine at the Hub Theatre in his new illustrated ballad. Mr. Fountaine, who made such a success last week; Master Doherty and [illegible] Plant were big drawing cards. [illegible] Brothers' pictures are in every respect up to date, interesting and, judging from the amount of applause received yesterday, thoroughly appreciated. Instrumental music is furnished by the ladies' orchestra. An entire change is made on Thursday.

CHILDREN SEE "BEN HUR."

Nearly three hundred children from the St. Vincent Home were guests of Manager Brooks at the Theatre Premiere yesterday during the production of Josselyn's series of panoramic views of "Ben Hur." This is the series given last year at the Food Fair and it is unusually entertaining.

KEITH'S BILL IS WORTHY OF ANNIVERSARY

For the twenty-fifth anniversary of the commencement of the career of B. F. Keith in the vaudeville field a representative bill of "the vaudeville of to-day" was advertised for the big house. In every respect the bill "made good." It was the best varied and most interesting bill that has been offered for a long time, and the audience last evening was not lax in its applause. Walter C. Kelley, in his familiar monologue as "The Virginia Judge," shared the headline honors with Clayton White and Marie Stuart, Bert Levy and Bessie Wynn. Kelley introduced new stories into his monologue, and kept the audience in constant laughter.

Clayton White and Marie Stuart had a new farce by [illegible] Hobart, entitled "Cherie," in which they had many opportunities to display their fun making ability. It is one of the brightest and best pieces in which these two people have yet appeared. Some fine opera singing presented by a thoroughly capable company was presented by the Romany Opera Troupe. The sketch which introduces them, entitled "Gypsy Life," gives little Florence Quinn, [illegible] Company and Alexander Bevin some excellent opportunities, and pretty Marie Carloni executes a fine violin solo. The ensemble work, however, was a little ragged. Then there was dainty Bessie Wynn. Bessie uses the rather ancient "plant" in the box for one of her principal numbers, but despite its antiquated method she makes good with a charming personality and a number of good songs.

Cooper and Robinson, the colored comedians, have their old but ever-popular sketch, and it made the old-time "hit." Bert Levy, the artist, introduced a number of new sketches intermixed with his pleasing whistling, and was one of the most enjoyable numbers on the programme.

The Lasky Quintette in a number of instrumental numbers, Caron and Herbert, acrobatic comedians; the Heras Family, presenting a really remarkable exhibition of tumbling; the Clarence Sisters, singers and dancers; Ed Estus, equilibrist; La Nole Brothers, comedy acrobats; Dudley and Cheslyn, musical comedians, and Fredericks, the magician, round out one of the best balanced and most entertaining bills seen here for some time.

NOVELLI IN OLD FARCE HAS LAUGHFEST

It was "laughing day" at the Majestic yesterday afternoon, for Ermete Novelli and his Italian players forsook tragedy and put on the Italian version of the old familiar farce, "A Night Off," Mr. Novelli playing the role of the professor. He made it an uproariously funny character and more logical than most of the American actors have done. So many different kinds of comedy have never before been made out of this role, and the result was one of the pleasantest, most satisfying matinees of the Novelli series. The audience was large and thoroughly interested, for everybody seemed to know the piece by heart. Mr. Cammeo played the Professor with much skill, and Miss Giannini was the professor's married daughter. Miss Rossi was the unmarried daughter—a remarkable bit of character work. The performance this afternoon will be of "La Morte Civile."

FIVE PLAYS HOLD OVER A WEEK

Patrons of the Majestic Theatre have every reason to be satisfied with the delightful entertainment furnished by "The Road to Yesterday," with Minnie Dupree and her company, which entered upon its final week here last night. The story is charming from the viewpoint of novelty. A present day girl lives over again the life she passed through three hundred years ago. The heroine dreams and bridges the lapse of centuries to mingle again with the people of other days.

"Romeo and Juliet" is meeting with extraordinary favor at the Castle Square, where its final performances began last evening before a large audience. Mme. Helene Noldi was at her best in the role. Lotte Grosvenor will make her professional debut as Juliet, and as she has studied here in Boston, the event is one of more than [illegible] importance. The final performances of "Romeo and Juliet" will be given to-morrow afternoon and evening with Mme. [illegible] of the acting. Thursday evening the first performance of the Gilbert and Sullivan opera, "The Gondoliers," will be given.

At the Boston Theatre last evening the final week of "Cheer, Boys, Cheer," was begun, with another big audience in attendance. In the contest on the polo field the handling of the horses was very skilfully done. The realistic fight between the British and the native tribes in Matabele Land creates a sensation.

London has sent another musical comedy success to Boston, and the playgoers of this city certainly like it very well. "The Dairymaids" blends English ideas, American methods and the most delicious of melodies, and therefore it is not at all strange that it is a warm favorite here. Everything went with an encore last evening.

One does not have to say, "Backward, turn backward, time in your flight," to Francis Wilson, for he makes time turn backward in a sensational fashion, and before it gets through he has taken everybody back in the ages some seven hundred years. It is the most amusing feature of "When Knights Were Bold," and it is not strange that the topsy turvy fun is proving pleasing here to the theatregoers of Boston. The last week of Mr. Wilson's engagement opened last evening.

WHOLE WORLD OF SPORTS COVERED FOR THE BOSTON AMERICAN BY ITS CORPS OF EXPERTS

WALCOTT AND GARDNER WILL MEET IN NEW ARENA OF ARMORY A. A. TONIGHT

Ready for its housewarming, the new Armory A. A. in the [illegible] Building will have its first entertainment tonight with the boxing show of the best class in the fistic line.

The opening marks a revolution in local boxing, as it is the first time that the sport has been attempted in a legitimate way and held well within the law, and every member who has paid his yearly dues is assured of seeing some of the greatest ring battles that can be arranged besides enjoying the other good things that this stellar [illegible] will [illegible] from time to time.

The membership has already reached the half thousand mark and is likely to be doubled before the officials of the club decide to put a limit on the lists.

The arena is built for the comfort of its members and is the most perfectly arranged for the benefit of the members. From every one of the 2,000 seats a clear and uninterrupted view of the ring may be obtained and every detail is provided for the comfort of the members and participants alike.

Highclass Membership

The membership books contain the names of many of the most prominent of the Hub's business and professional men, who welcome the formation of a club where they can enjoy the sport under the best advantages. Every applicant for admission has been thoroughly investigated and any doubtful characters have been transferred to the black list. When the boxers get in the ring to put their talents with the mitts there will be looking down upon them the most representative lot of Boston's solid inhabitants who ever gathered at the ringside.

Tonight the workers of the [illegible] will be Joe Walcott and Jimmy Gardner, who are likely to furnish about the greatest scrap that has been on the boards for a long time. Both men are primed for the hardest kind of a battle and the twelve rounds, if the bout goes the limit, will be full of action.

The managers of the two men will meet today and decide on a referee to render a decision, as the club's official has not yet been definitely decided on, and the third is likely to be Jack Sheehan, the veteran arbitrator of ring affairs.

It is several years since Gardner displayed his ability in the local ring and he has made numerous trips to the West as well as to the Quaker fighting town and has won notable victories, which has placed him in the front rank of the welterweight class.

Walcott Claims Champ.

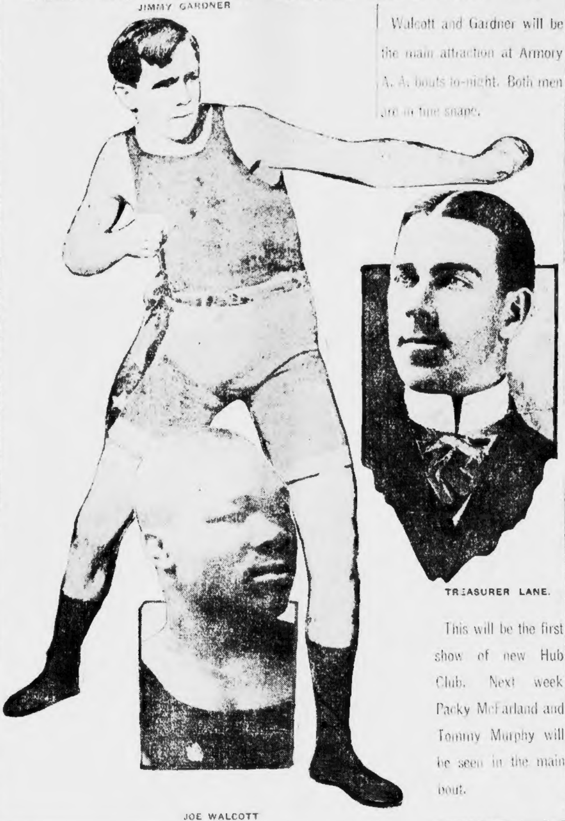
There is a lot of outside interest in this bout, as Walcott still holds claim to the welterweight title and a win by Gardner would complicate matters and have another live disputer in the field for the crown.

Walcott has never yet failed to give the Hub fans a run for their money and is as aggressive today as when he first stepped in the ring. His recent victory over the big heavyweight, George Cole, in Philadelphia shows what condition he must be in and he will keep the Lowell boy busy from the gong.

There is a great divergence of opinion relative to the outcome of the match, each man having his own following, and they are about evenly divided, but Gardner, owing to his youth, will naturally be a favorite.

Two grand bouts precede the feature. In the first one Billy Kirkland of Roxbury will face Jeff Doherty of Connecticut, while in the second contest Tommy Rawson of East Boston will mix it up with Mike Farley of Chicago. Both bouts are limited to eight rounds, and the first pair will be hard at work when the hands of the clock point to 8 p. m.

WALCOTT AND GARDNER AND TREASURER LANE OF ARMORY A. A.



JIMMY GARDNER

TREASURER LANE.

JOE WALCOTT

Walcott and Gardner will be the main attraction at Armory A. A. bouts to-night. Both men are in fine shape.

This will be the first show of new Hub Club. Next week Packy McFarland and Tommy Murphy will be seen in the main bout.

GEORGE DIXON TO BE BURIED IN OLD HOME

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—George Dixon, the famous boxer, who died at Bellevue Hospital, will be buried in Boston.

Inflammatory rheumatism and heart failure following a protracted bout with John Barleycorn carried out the little fighter. [illegible] was conscious to the last and [illegible] the end. He knew he was going and when Dr. Hooker bent over [illegible] the little fighter looked up with [illegible] courage. He read in the doctor's [illegible] what the physician [illegible]

"[illegible] the gong, doctor," [illegible] the little featherweight. "I know [illegible]"

Dixon was only thirty-seven years old. Dixon's first fight was back in 1886, when he whipped a boy named Johnson in Halifax, N. S. From that time until 1900, when Terry McGovern knocked him out and broke his heart, no man of his weight ever beat Dixon.

In all he fought several hundred battles. Frank Erne beat him, as did Solly Smith, but these were merely decisions and both men were good boxers. He won the championship in 1890 by whipping the champion, Cal McCarthy.

DORCHESTER DRIVING CLUB ELECTION

At the annual election of the Dorchester Driving Club Walter E. Newhall was selected for president during the ensuing year. F. O. Hildreth defeated W. M. Hammond by nine votes for first vice president. D. Allen got the position of second vice president. George A. Greenwood was named for secretary, R. S. Fitch continues treasurer, while the following were elected directors: Fred H. Bellows, H. F. Gallup, F. O. Guild, J. W. Lonehan and A. M. Johnson.

Joseph Swendeman, chairman of the race committee, presented the trophies won the past season in the speedway matinees, which each recipient responded to with a neat speech.

J. W. Lonehan got the first prize for trotters with J. W. L.; A. M. Johnson the second with Rex, and H. R. Thayer the third with Alto L. For pacers, Frank Hamlin won the first with Bly Wilkes, second went to A. J. Legg's gelding Wilkeshrino, third to E. S. Harris's colt Sunrise.

The Chester F. Greenwood cup was awarded to E. H. Harris's Sunrise; the A. H. Parker service to Alliewood, 2:09¼, to F. H. Hamlin's Bly Wilkes; the suit of horse clothing to A. J. Legg's Wilkeshrino; the subscription cup to R. G. Crosby's R. S. Dillon, and eight special ribbons were then given the winners.

A. H. Parker and Arthur Hatton were elected honorable members of the club for the interest they have displayed in the organization.

J. N. Terry offered a cup for the trotter or pacer, not wearing hopples, that wins the most points, starting at least four times in the coming season. Joseph Swendeman suggested the club give a $100 cup to the horse winning the most points and making the most starts this year that shows up to start in the matinees by 3 o'clock. Representative H. W. Burr offered a cup to be known as the "Hard Luck" trophy, the owner of the horse having the toughest luck in not winning races during the year to be the victor.

It was voted to hold a stag party in the club rooms on the evening of January 20. The report of the treasurer showed a credit for the club of close to $2,000. The past season was by far the most successful in the club's history.

KNOCKOUTS AT HAVERHILL

HAVERHILL, Jan. 7.—Dick Nelson and Willie Cornell of Bridgeport fought eight rounds to a draw. The attendance was small, so the main bout was cut four rounds. The three preliminaries all ended in knockouts. Fred Martin put George Harris to sleep in the third round. Kid Hayes of Boston substituted for Young Murray of the same city and was knocked out by Young Donahue of Lawrence in the third round. In the semi-final Scotty Magee of Lawrence put Young Donahue of the same city out in the second.

Sporting News Briefly Told

SWEENEY IN RING AGAIN.

Arthur Cote, the Maine lightweight, and Patsey Sweeney of Manchester are matched to meet at the Manchester A. C., January 10. Sweeney has been out of the ring for some time but as he has been doing daily training [illegible] and has shown some of his old-time form in private bouts will make the Maine lightweight travel at top speed for the decision.

HANRAHAN BEAT WILSON.

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—In the main event at the Consolidated A. C. Joe Hanrahan beat Bobby Wilson in a six-round fight. In the preliminaries Jack Hayes and Jack Hurley fought a six-round draw. Billy Smith knocked out George Baker in the fourth round, and Young Scotty beat Roxy Clayborne in four rounds.

BALL TEAM IN FIELD.

The Carleton baseball team of Worcester would like to hear from seventeen-year-old teams to fill up schedule for next season. Want some games with Roxy Walcott. Leroy F. Elliott, No. 124 Southgate street, Worcester.

JACKSON WANTS BOUTS.

Young Jackson, the Australian colored featherweight, is in the Hub and will meet any of the 118-122 pound boys. He prefers Kid Barrett, Young Knox.

ROLLER POLO RESULTS.

Bridgeport, 6; Pawtucket, 3.
Providence, 2; New Britain, 1.

GAMES TODAY.

Boston at Waterbury.
New Britain at Pawtucket.
Bridgeport at New Haven.

ANSWER TO QUERIES.

A. Mattus, Woonsocket.—With "A" dealing, "B," the first man on left, has the "age" and "C," the second man on the left, has the first say. In jackpots, with A dealing, "B" has the first say.

A. R., Athol.—The bet is off.

Thos. J. Maloney, New Bedford.—1. Neil fought under Marquis of Queensberry rules. 2, John Arthur Johnson.

CORNELL RACE CALLED OFF.

There will be no race this year between the Harvard and Cornell crews, as the Crimson management says it has been too much of a strain on the men to meet Cornell, Columbia and Yale all within a few weeks.

SIGNAL CORPS CHAMP LOST.

PORTLAND, Jan. 7.—Fighting Eddie Harrigan of Portland knocked out Billy O'Brien, champion of the U. S. A. Signal Corps, in the third round of their scheduled six-round bout at Fort McKinley.

CUTLER STARTS WELL.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 7.—Albert Cutler of Boston defeated Willie Hoppe of Chicago here in the first game of the 1,500-point 18.1 billiard match, by a score of 500 to 24. The match will continue today and Wednesday.

PARKER MEETS VAN DYKE.

In the opening game of the Class A billiard tournament at the Hub Palace William Prior defeated Harry Parker by a score of 300 to 233. Parker plays Van Dyke tonight.

JOE CORBETT RELEASED.

BROOKLYN, Jan. 7.—President Charles H. Ebbets of the Brooklyn club announced yesterday that he had given Joe Corbett his unconditional release and had released Pitcher Farley to the Waterbury club of the Connecticut State League. Corbett has been under reserve by the Brooklyn club since the consolidation with Baltimore in 1900. Since then he played with the California State League before that organization got into organized baseball.

MORAN MAY MEET DELMONT.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7.—Now that Owen Moran has made up his mind to go East and accept a ten weeks' theatrical engagement Abe Attell is lending a willing ear to a Neil-Attell match. Abe first proposed to box six rounds with Frankie Neil before the Reliance Club of Oakland, but Neil would have none of it. He wants a twenty-round go at least. Moran will later likely meet Al Delmont in Boston.

NEW DIRECTORS FOR DRIVING CLUB

The following directors, treasurer and secretary were elected at the annual election of the Gentlemen's Driving Club at Young's Hotel, the directors to meet next week at A. S. Bigelow's office for the purpose of selecting a president, vice-president and committees for the ensuing year:

A. S. Bigelow, H. C. Jackson, John Shepard, Charles Whittemore, Lewis Robeson, George F. Leonard, C. H. Belleden, Benjamin Pope, T. I. Quimby, Frank G. Hall, Arnold Lawson, A. C. Haley and Charles Sanders. Treasurer, Lewis Robeson. Secretary, T. I. Quimby.

In order that there be a Grand Circuit meeting next August at Readville the club will act in harmony with the New England Breeders' Association in raising the $10,000 guarantee fund.

ROOT MEETS LOGAN AT PARK SQ. RINK

Patsy Logan, the popular South Boston bike chaser, will have a chance to become famous tonight, as he is to face Eddie Root in a series of motor-paced races at the Park [illegible] Rink indoor track.

It will [illegible] Root's debut behind the motors, but it is needless to say that the great six-day rider has done some hard plugging for several weeks behind the pacing machines. He has all the speed necessary and is one of the nerviest riders in the world and he is likely to get into the Walthour, MacLean, Moran class shortly.

The best guessers figure that they will fare better in a two-mile open with no handicap to overcome and there will be some warm going with the fastest combating in the last mile.

MANY PRIZES FOR BEST KEPT STABLES

Entries to the stable competition offered by the Work Horse Parade Association close on January 15, with Secretary Lewis A. Armistead, 15 Beacon street, and from indications will be even more liberal than was the case last year. It should be remembered that there is no entry fee.

Certificates, and prizes consisting of money and gold or silver medals, will be awarded to the owners of the horses and to the stable foremen, and competition is open to stables of every kind, including livery and boarding stables.

At the banquet of the Work Horse Parade Association last evening, at the Revere House, plans for its year were mapped out.

SIX LITTLE TAILORS

Reorganization Sale

$250,000 Must Be Raised!

At a meeting of the directors of this corporation, held on Jan. 1, 1908, it was voted to retire several of the older, inactive members and give entire control over to the younger and more progressive ones.

As we have only until July 1 to raise the above amount, in order to acquire control of their stock, we intend to stagger the tailoring world with a sale so tremendous and prices so low that it will be within the means of everyone to have his garments made to measure.

Just think of it—a suit or overcoat at the advertised price made by the oldest and largest tailoring concern in the United States, whose reputation is unsurpassed by the higher priced tailors in the world.

NEW RED SOX MADE FINE SHOWING LAST SEASON IN THE EASTERN LEAGUE

Hub fans were highly pleased when they got a peep at the Eastern League averages, which Pat Powers has just allowed to be published, as they proved conclusively that the Red Sox got the best hitter in the Eastern League in Thoney and all the loud praises that have been bestowed upon the Toronto player were deserving.

He played in 102 games, made 136 base hits and had an average of .329. He was next to the second in the list as a run getter, stood high as an extra base hitter and had top ranking as a base stealer.

McConnell, the Providence second sacker, also had a record which speaks volumes for him as a player and surely puts him among the best of the minor leaguers. He led the Providence team in batting, and as the club led the league in this respect McConnell's ability is better understood. His work at the second corner was nothing sensational, but he played a consistent game and was well up in the rating among the second basemen in the league.

Carrigan the backstop played eighty-six games for Toronto and made ninety-three hits, getting a mark of .319. He had a good fielding average, accepting many chances, but showed a weakness on his plays.

Chadbourne, who was seen here in several games at the close of the season, was next to McConnell in team batting, making .294. He proved an adept at base stealing and very few had anything on him for fleetness on the bases. Compared with Thoney as a fielder, he was several points shy.

Lord, another member of the Red Sox from the Providence team, was one of the heaviest hitters on the Grays. His specialty was sacrifice hitting and he led the league in advancing a base runner.

• • •

Fielder A. Jones will be the manager of the White Sox in the coming campaign for the American League pennant.

This positive statement was made by Mrs. "Billy" Sullivan, wife of the Sox catcher. Mrs. Jones, in a letter to Mrs. Sullivan, declared emphatically that her husband will again guide the fortunes of the ex-world's champions.

This announcement did not come as a great surprise, but it ended all doubts on the matter. Despite the oft-repeated statements of President Comiskey, there had been considerable anxiety among the White Sox rooters. While most of the loyal supporters believed that Jones would be on hand for the opening of the season, his continued silence as to his intentions in the face of the many reports that he had decided to give up baseball caused no uneasiness.

Chance at the Old Howard to See BURNS AND MOIR FIGHT

It cost just $52.50 for the best seats to see the Burns-Moir fight for the world's heavyweight championship in London last month, and even for the very cheapest seats one had to settle $15.75 to be a favored party, but through the enterprise of the Howard the fans of Boston and vicinity are enabled this week to see every move made in the great international fight by the medium of moving pictures for only the moderate theatre price for tickets.

In this case the moving pictures of the event were a success, the passes, swings, side-stepping of the fighters, etc., being very plain in the rounds shown. Jack Sheehan illustrates all the moves in different rounds with a good description of what is coming just previous to the round being flashed on the screen.

The old Howard was never more filled than at the opening performance to see the pictures of Tommy Burns and Gunner Moir battling for money and glory, and when Burns landed a stiff counter or straight punch to the Gunner's jaw a wild yell of delight swept over the crowded house.

To tell the truth, Burns looks bigger in the moving pictures than what he was supposed to size up against Moir from the stories we received of their ring encounter.

Then, too, it was evident from the start almost that the Englishman was not nearly the polished boxer of Burns. The pictures show the latter dancing around in the first rounds with a smile of content on his face; in fact, he does not cut loose for keeps till the tenth, or final round, when he is all over his man from the tap of the gong, knocking the Gunner down three times, the finishing punch being plainly seen in the picture.

There was nothing in the fight to show the Gunner a great infighter, as the reports about him declared he was. His posture in the first place was pretty bad for a bidder for world's honors.

His feet were wide apart and well planted upon the canvas floor, and in the contest he jumped from side to side in an awkward style which showed lack of speed. In the third round the Britishers can be seen cheering their candidate, and it is was the only round in the battle that Moir gave Burns any kind of a run.

In the eighth round Moir is a pretty sight for a slaughter house. Blood is shown flowing from cuts in his face. Moir could have stepped many of Burns's blows had he not been so tarnal slow, but in the hands of Burns he was a baby in arms. However, he evidently was game to the core, taking punishment as it came with fortitude.

The pictures remain after Moir has been counted out till Burns walks to the defeated man's corner, shakes his hand, and, turning, waves the American flag he has unwound from his waist to the crowd.

SPEEDY CODERO IS SOLD FOR EXPORT

John Splan has bought for export of Ralph R. Williams of this city the five-year-old trotting stallion Codero (2:09¾), by Bingen (2:06¼). The reported price is $7,500.

Codero is a remarkably handsome, finely gaited young stallion and raced successfully the past season in Lon McDonald's stable, and his record of 2:09¾ was the fastest mile trotted by a four-year-old trotter last year.

While in Boston a short time ago Mr. Splan looked at a number of trotting stallions for export to Austria, but the fast mare Lotta (2:08¼) was his only purchase. He had Codero in his mind, and after his return to Lexington closed the deal with Mr. Williams's trainer, Lon McDonald.

ELLIOT LEE IS PRESIDENT OF BAY STATE A. A.

By J. C. KERRISON

Elliot C. Lee, formerly president of the American Automobile Association and also of the Massachusetts Automobile Club, was yesterday elevated to the presidency of the Bay State Automobile Association, the leading and most active motoring organization in New England. It was at the annual election of the organization that Mr. Lee was accorded these latest honors, and there is no question but what his selection is a wise one, as it brings to the aid of the organization one of the strongest and most influential motorists of this section.

Vice-President Harlan W. Whipple, Treasurer Harry W. Knights and Secretary James Fortescue were re-elected, as were also Directors G. W. McNear, A. P. Underhill and J. C. Kerrison, the other two directors elected, J. W. Maguire and Dr. Julius E. Hovestadt, taking the places formerly held by A. E. Hinchcliffe and Charles E. Fay, both of whom declined a renomination. The three retiring officers, Lewis R. Speare, Charles E. Fay and F. A. Hinchcliffe, were tendered a vote of thanks for the services rendered, all three having in the past proven valuable workers for the organization.

The reports of the several officers, showing the true condition of the organization were read and accepted, and it is evident that the incoming board has its work cut out in great large chunks. There was no talk regarding giving up the present clubhouse; in fact, all such has existed only in the minds of some few persons.

E. A. Gilmore of the Whitten-Gilmore Company is decidedly busy these days exhibiting the fine points of the Thomas speedway flyer, 70-horse power runabout. This car has been in Boston but a day and yet it has attracted no end of attention. The first two of this model were sold and delivered to W. K. Vanderbilt and E. Russell Thomas and will probably be raced by them at Ormond.

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, JANUARY 7, 1908

Come Into the Open With Your Policy, Mr. Mellen

Please Set a Date When You Will Meet IN PUBLIC Some Opponent of the Merger Proposition

One of the best tests of honesty, truth, sincerity, rectitude of purpose, is willingness to enter upon public discussion with those who represent opposing views.

Will President Mellen of the New Haven Railroad prove his faith in the righteousness of his cause by meeting Louis D. Brandeis or Professor Frank Parsons in Tremont Temple or Faneuil Hall or other central auditorium for a public discussion of the merger question?

During the legislative investigation Mr. Mellen made an address, but refused to allow Mr. Brandeis to ask him a question and declined to stay in the room to hear what Mr. Brandeis had to say.

Mr. Brandeis had in his hand:

I.—A couple of letters signed by Mr. Mellen pledging that his railroad would buy no more trolley lines in Massachusetts until the question of the right to make such purchases should be settled, and

II.—Clear evidence that Mr. Mellen had not kept this pledge, but had made further purchases of trolleys in this State, although the question of legality was not settled.

It is easy to understand why President Mellen should feel delicate about entering upon a public discussion with Mr. Brandeis under such circumstances.

But suppose a guaranty is given that all personal matters shall be eliminated, will he then discuss the merger?

If President Mellen still feels delicate about bringing himself before the public to defend his policy, and prefers to confine his discussions of the merger to select conferences with the Governor and leading legislators, will he name some competent railroad officer, thoroughly familiar with the facts, to take the New Haven side of the question?

Some weeks ago a young man of good address and representing one of the best and biggest clubs in Boston spent many days (the better part of three weeks altogether) trying to get a competent man who could speak with authority in defence of the merger policy of the New Haven Railroad, but he failed.

From President Mellen down they all refused to defend the merger IN PUBLIC.

But surely Mr. Mellen will not persist in trying to deal with the merger in the dark.

Surely he will recognize the right of the public to full and open discussion of this important question, under circumstances offering something like the right of cross-examination.

Probably he was only delaying the matter a little till he could get his facts more thoroughly in hand.

Will he not set a date when he will meet an opponent of the merger policy in public discussion of the question?

There Is SOMETHING, After All, in Unions—in Solidarity

The Little Man Who Holds Himself Apart Can Be Kicked with Great Safety

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner

Occasionally during the past ten years we have tried to impress upon readers of all kinds the importance of ORGANIZING for self-protection.

We have told the estimable young clerks in their black coats and nice red neckties—the cheap, respectable little men who parade on Election Day in favor of prosperity and who are the first to get discharged in time of trouble—that they ought also to protect themselves.

We have pointed out the fact that mechanics and other workmen are strong BECAUSE THEY ARE UNITED.

Many of the little gentlemen who make a living as clerks have looked down with scorn upon the union man, and possibly also upon the suggestion that they should protect themselves by organization.

Now we call their attention to an interesting piece of news.

The clerks of the Erie Railroad are all to have their pay reduced—some 5 per cent. and some 2 per cent. Every man of them, except those that get less than $60 per month, will have the pleasure of seeing his income diminished from now on.

Whether or not the clerks were paid as much as they might have been paid, when BETTER FINANCIAL CONDITIONS WOULD HAVE MADE AN INCREASE POSSIBLE, we don't know.

Anyhow THE CLERKS are to have their pay reduced from now on.

And the union labor mechanics and others are not to have their pay reduced.

The little man with the respectable black coat and nice necktie, clean collar and large family of children will see his income cut down. And the mechanic, with the oil-stained jumper and the dinner pail on his arm, WHO MAKES OFTEN TWICE AS MUCH AND NEARLY ALWAYS MORE THAN THE AVERAGE CLERK, will see his income go on as big as it was before.

The railroad announces that it will cut the wages of all EXCEPT THOSE WHOSE PAY IS FIXED BY THE UNIONS.

When the young gentlemen with the nice coats get over the surprise of this announcement we advise them to think over once more the possibility and the advisability of protecting themselves by some kind of union.

IT PAYS MEN TO STICK TOGETHER.

The Spice of Life

Odd contrasts are to be found continually in the great bioscope of daily life, the newspaper. Here is Alex. Peacock offering $1,000,000 to the physician who saves the life of his friend, Frank Ridgeway, Pittsburg's Director of Public Safety. The offer is in vain; friendship, money nor skill avail, while the same day Hank Smith, an ironworker, falls 150 feet from the Blackwell's Island bridge—and swims gayly ashore.

A solitary Santa Catalina fisherman lands a four-hundred-pound swordfish, while a six-pound carp nearly drowns Harold Marks under the ice near Waterbury.

Honeysuckle blooms at Montclair, N. J., while timber wolves have been observed at Barhampstead, Ct.

English women lament the growing hesitance of men to marry; in another column is mentioned a Devonshire farmer who public to marry Mrs. Pankhurst, the most notorious of the militant su

It is a dull day that doesn't show some contrasts as strang of human nature itself.

She Asks What Philanthropic Woman of Leisure Will Start a Good Work for Saddened Hearts

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner

DO you sometimes look in the mirror and feel very irritable toward Fate, Destiny, Nature or your parents for not making you more beautiful?

Perhaps your nose displeases you; or your hair is not the right color; or you are freckled; or you are an inch too short or too tall, or a pound too thin or too fat; or you are too blond or too brunette.

Thousands of really sensible women make themselves quite miserable over such matters.

Then do you stop and think of the thousands of crippled and deformed people who are obliged to go through life and hunt for happiness as best they may, while continually conscious of their misfortune? And does not this thought make you ashamed of your own discontent?

An educated and refined woman wrote me recently regarding her condition. She was the victim of an accident in infancy which deformed her for life.

This deformity makes her sensitive about appearing at social gatherings; because here in America, more than anywhere on earth, there is a vulgar curiosity and a lack of refinement shown toward anything that is not ordinary, and which renders a person who is in any way unusual a subject of unpleasant attention.

Courteous Abroad

IN every foreign land the people of other countries can go about in their native dress and not feel they are advance agents for a circus, as here in America.

In Paris you will see all sorts of remarkable costumes and all types of peculiar looking people walking along or driving through the principal boulevards, and no one is staring them out of countenance except the American tourists.

It has already been related in this column how one American genius, afflicted with a personal eccentricity, adopted Japan as his land, because so much more delicacy was shown him. No one made him feel he was different from others.

So we can understand how this refined and afflicted lady shrinks from going out socially, here in her native land. Here is what she writes:

> I am a business woman, and do not have time for anything but business during the day, but am often lonesome and downhearted evenings, when the day's duties are over. I am sure there are many more like me in this big city, who are, in a way, isolated on account of their deformity, and do not attend social functions on account of it.
>
> Could you not suggest to me a way in which a club might be formed, to have for its members only those afflicted like myself? I am sure that many would be glad to join such an organization, to meet socially, exchange ideas, etc.
>
> There could be entertainments occasionally, perhaps, the proceeds to go to crippled and deformed children.

A Good Idea

THIS is an excellent idea; and here is a good work for some philanthropic woman of leisure who wants to help humanity in some new way, without a large outlay of money.

Let her set about organizing the deformed and crippled people of the land into a social and charitable club, which shall give amusement and pleasure to many sad men and women and open a possible fund for helping crippled children to surgical treatment.

There are hundreds of capable women of leisure in America who possess the ability to organize such a society. It would be an excellent work with which to begin the New Year.

Such an organization would bring comfort to many lonely hearts. It would create a bond of sympathy between fellow sufferers, and dissipate the clouds of despondency which darken isolated lives, with the sunshine of companionship.

One such society organized in a city would open the way for others to be formed.

Who will start it?

The Honorable Allies

BY WEX JONES

GREAT merriment in Tokio; great glee in London town;
An honorable treaty joins the White Man and the Brown.
The worthy British Lion loves the worthy Rising Sun,
The red rayed flag and Union Jack henceforth shall wave as one.
"Those jolly little Jappies," says the bully British chap;
"Banzai to Mister Bull," exclaims the honorable Jap;
"We're pals from now, old fellow," says the worthy Johnny Bull;
Says the bowing little Brown Man, "Together now we pull."

THE honorable Jap proclaimed he loved the open door,
But when he got Manchuria he opened it no more;
The honorable ally, now the treaty had been made,
Was very wrong in thinking he could share Manchurian trade.
And furthermore the Brown Man, having subsidized a fleet,
Ran the worthy P. & O. boats off their honorable beat;
While by gently cribbing trade-marks in his Oriental way
He showed the British makers competition wouldn't pay.
And to the British protests that were cabled without end
Said, "You wouldn't doubt the motives of an honorable friend!"

THE honorable Briton, when the treaty had been signed,
Met an opportunity to show his friendly mind—
A bunch of worthy allies in Vancouver settled down,
Full of love and friendship for the worthy ally's town;
So up rose several Britons, and with honorable guns
Proceeded to shoot holes in the worthy Nippon's sons;
With honorable punches and with honorable jabs,
With gracious kicks and wallops and with gracious belts and stabs,
With worthy thumps and beatings and with honorable raps,
They showed their friendly feeling for the honorable Japs;
And when the sons of Nippon had received it in the neck
Their jolly allies made their stores an honorable wreck,
While the Japs that weren't injured all flourished friendly knives,
And in their honorable way took several Canuck lives.
And now to all the protests that Tokio can send,
London cables, "Can you doubt your Occidental friend?"
